Essentially names persons, places, things, ideas, or properties. e.g., Franklin, boy, Yangtze River, coastline, Bible, office, fear, happiness. Pronouns usually replace the nouns and act as nouns, e.g., me, you, him, her, us, them, me, him, him, who, who, everyone. Verbs express actions, incidents or situations of existence, e.g., be, become, bunt, inflate, run. The adjectives describe or modify nouns or pronouns, e.g. mild, useful, small. Adverbs describe or modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs, e.g. almost, gently, auxiliary, someday. Intentions relate essentially or pronouns to other words in a sentence, e.g., about, below, for, with. Links link words, terms, and phrases. There are moderators who link words, clauses or phrases of equal importance, and there are subordination links that introduce secondary clauses and link them to the main clauses. Interventions attention or attention of the command, either or or in a sentence, e.g., darn, hey, oh, wow. Certain words (adjectives, adverbs, interventions, nouns, verbs) are productive that allow new members, others, in a functional rather than a vocabulary sense (articles, links, intentions) are non-productive and have a limited number of members. Some grammars consider articles, quantitates and numbers to be also parts of speech.
