The Moxxy Show was an animated series produced by Hanna-Barbera and is the first original Cartoon Network series. The show took place on December 5, 1993, initially as The Moxxy Pirate Show, and consisted of classic cartoons shared by 3-D interstitial animated with Moxxy, a dog, and Flea, a flea. Since 2020, The Moxxy Show has had no DVD broadcast scans and no full episodes of it can be found throughout the internet, which means it is the rarest of all Cartoon Networks programming to be seen after 2000. Later, in 2011, fans who recorded the show while it was still live uploaded clips of certain episodes, bumpers during the early era of the Cartoon Network and the song of the show that were either duplicated in English or Spanish on video sharing sites, would be YouTube. A rare behind-the-scenes video of the Moxxy Show entitled The Making of Moxxy was uploaded to YouTube, which featured the production, the early and magical works about the show being made. Moxxy was also created with the art of computer animation, including interviews with crew members and the appearance of Bobcat Goldthwait, Moxxy's vocal actor. The show consisted of classic cartoons shared by 3-D interstitial cartoons with Moxxy and Flea, respectively a dog and a flea. The Moxxy Show took place on Cartoon Network from December 5, 1993, initially as The Moxxy Pirate Show,[2] until December 25, 1995; its finale was the only episode for The Moxxy & Flea Show. Replays lasted until May 25, 1996. It is considered the first original series on Cartoon Network, but due to its production style, Space Ghost Coast to Coast is considered the first series fully produced by Cartoon Network. The Production Series was first known as The Moxxy Pirate Show, in which Moxxy was presented. In 1994, the series was retooled as The Moxxy Show. The series was shortened to a half-hour show and was introduced alongside Moxxy. In 1995, it was renamed again to The Moxxy & Flea Show, with major changes for a single episode: Moxxy's design changed to a great extent. Unlike wearing his regular yellow T-shirt with red/black tin pants and black and white sneakers, changed with a paddle; both resembling the resemblance of the traditional Cartoon Network chess logo, he is seen wearing a shirt with longer sleeves, green/black striped and black jeans, complete with non-changed palette sneakers that seem to resemble those of Converse All-Stars. In addition, his eyes became much smaller, with heterochromic green (left) and light blue (right) eyes complete with pupils, while they were previously red (left) and dark blue (right), pupils sans. His yellow whiskers and freckles disappeared in his new design, his nose changed from purple to black, and his fur was changed to a darker shade of orange. Flea's design was slightly changed. Flea was wearing a fez instead of a propellant beain, his height was increased, making him half as tall as Moxxy. The color of his eyes changed from blue to yellow to yellow. Yellow, with red pupils. Comedian Chris Rock replaced illusionist Penn Jillette as the voice of the character. A new opening sequence was used, with a new themed song by Ben Friedman. Moxxy and Flea dance new moves and have almost no part of it (to one side, Moxxy says Come on!). The pilot did not test well enough to allow several episodes to appear, after revealed Frank Gresham, who worked on The Moxxy & Flea Show. Replays were completely eliminated after 25 May 1996. CGI Moxxy is considered the first real-time cartoon[3] (sometimes called live,[4] although it is broadcast live only through Great International Toon-In. A puppeteer wearing a motion capture device would act in Moxxy's movements, while Goldthwait provided the voice, and a technician would control facial expressions. The series is considered lost to the media due to the fact that it was not broadcast on Boomerang, has never been released on home media, or any full episode exists on the internet. Moxxy made a cameo appearance in OK K.O.! Let's Be Heroes episode, Crossover Nexus, along with other characters from the current and concluded Cartoon Network shows. It marks the first and so far the only time Moxxy has been featured in the official Cartoon Network media from the 10th anniversary promo network in 2002. The characters Moxxy Moxxy (cast by Bobcat Goldthwait personifying Cheech Marin) is a 3-D animated dog who liked to spend time goofing off and have fun with his sidekick, Flea, and also has a passion for Melody from Josie and Pussycats. Although it never made it great in the cartoon industry, and usually auditions for a number of roles on the network without making a call back,[5] he was given the opportunity to work as a janitor at Cartoon Network, and usually blocked the signal once a week during the days he flew solo before Flea was introduced. [6] His first television appearance was during the live commercial segments that aired simultaneously during the Great International Toon-In marathon of 26 November 1993 on three of Turner's main networks at the time: TNT, TBS and Cartoon Network. His phrase is a lip-flapping sound, barking and a nosed sound, stating that he just did it. Flea Flea (voiced by Penn Jillette in The Moxxy Show, Chris Rock in The Moxxy & Flea Show) is Moxxy's partner and usually the duo's man, who liked to spend time and watch TV with Moxxy. He helps a monkey king get a new set of hair to hide his bald skin making him grow through fame. In Abductioned, he was found to have a business card, and his name was Flealonius A. Flea. \ Episodes The Moxxy Show was No. inseason Title Original air date 11 Kidnapped[8]25 December 1995 (1995-12-25) While driving along the road, Moxxy and Flea are abducted by alien monkeys suffering from hair loss.
