UESPWiki – Your source for older rolls since 1995 Elven weapons and lightweight armor are medium quality objects that are made using mineral moonstone. Weapons and some armor require a quicksilver and a moonstone. The elvenging techniques were developed by Altmer and were originally a closely guarded secret (see Light Armor Forging). Overview[edit code] Name ID Moonstone Ore 0005ace0 1 30 Refined Moonstone 0005ad9f 1 75 Three moon ore extracted from the mining veins of the moonstone. One refined moonstone is obtained by melting two moon shackles. Elven Smithing requires 30 or more smithing skills. Elven armor is a level 12 light armor, made of refined moonstone, iron ingots, leather and leather straps. Elven weapon is a level 19 weapon made of refined moonstone, quicksilver ingots, iron ingots and leather straps. Refined moonstone is also used in forging glass weapons and armor. Mineral resources[edit code] In addition to the following guaranteed resources, the best random locations are: Refined moonstone can be sold by blacksmiths starting at level 6 and dealers of general merchandise starting at level 4. The moon wall can be sold by blacksmiths and merchants of general merchandise starting at level 10. The moon wall can be found at random in Falmer's prey starting on the 7th floor. There are a total of 44 veins, 6 ores and 9 ingots in the guaranteed locations. Some of the individual veins located outside and not close to any attractions have been left out of the following list. The Moonstone Veins category also contains a list of locations containing veins, and the map shows all the veins for external ora. Elven Smithing is the first priority in the Light Armor branch of the Smithing Perk tree. It takes at least 30 smithing skills to unlock, and smithing's steel perk had to be unlocked. Elven Smithing makes elf armor elven armor and elves' weapons to be made. Elven Smithing perk also causes tempered electric weapons and armor (including elven gilded armor and elven lightweight armor) to be twice more effective. This advantage applies both to unseaven elven tools and to enchanted equipment (generic armor, generic weapon or custom) as long as the Arcane Blacksmith permit has been unlocked. Tempered by several other items also improves Elven Smithing, namely: Borvir's Dagger, Firiniel's End, Herebane's Courage, Herebane's Fortress, and Auriel's BowDG. Elven Armor[edit code] Elven armor is a medium quality armor with several variants. Standard elven armor is better quality than leather, but lower quality than weighted. It's also the easiest set of armor in the game. It appears on flatlists starting at level 12 (vicious varieties at level 13). Elven's gold-plated armor is an improved version of cuirass, which is also unlocked with an Elven Smithing perk, but is created using a quicksilver in the city's leather. His shell rating is six points higher, making it better than the weighted armor, but it has the same weight as the standard. However, the entire set of elilin armour, when equipped with elven gold-plated armor, has the same overall rating of armour as the whole set of weighted armor. It appears on level 27 straightened lists starting (vicious varieties at level 28). Elven lightweight armor is a version worn by Thalmor that includes boots, cuirass, gauntlets, and a helmet, but without a shield. The Player cannot share it and does not appear on straight lists. Despite its name, it weighs no less than a standard elven armor, but is of lower overall quality (with the same assessment of armor as leather armor). All versions of elven armor can be germed using one refined moonstone, with the exception of elfin gilded armor, which is tempered using one quicksilver ingot. Elven Smithing perk doubles the quality improvement. Each combination of elves and elves light armor qualifies for a Matching Set Perk. However, the elf's gold-plated shell does not match any of the other pieces. Therefore, for characters who have unlocked the Bonus Matching Set, the elf's gilded shell cuirass is effectively of lower quality than elven armor cuirass. This was corrected by the official Skyrim Patch v1.9. Every combination of elves, elves and gilded armour now benefits from a matching sect. You can make it when the hunter is done. The kit lacks helmet and shield, although the usual pieces can be used to match the set perk. Set pieces are the same as ordinary pieces, unless each piece has two more points in the cling rating. Since the gold-plated armor is still superior, it can be combined with hunter boots and gauntlets, and a regular helmet and shield to get an overall cling rating of 89. This combination exceeds the quality of the weighted armor, while remaining the lightest armor in the game. This error is corrected with version 1.3.1 of the unofficial skyrim patch. Note[edit code] Elven armor may be a better general choice than lightweight armor made from better quality materials: with sufficient smithing and light armor levels and advantages, elven armor can be improved well past the armored 567 caps, at this point there is no advantage of upgrading to rock, glass, or dragon rock armor. In reality, it would be a disadvantage due to the increased weight of these armored types, unless you have advantages that negate the weight of the armor. If you're carrying an elf's sword, the guards can ask, Why the elf blade, hmm? Nord steel not good enough for you? Moonstone jewelry can be found in random prey (that is, Baker and Moonstone Cirlet and Silver and Moonstone Cirlet), but you can't make it. Moonstone (ore or ingot) is one of four items needed in Atronach Forge to create the staff of Frost Atronach. The moon's ore could be sold to Perth for the Quest Mine Ore. Ore vein (all kinds) are sometimes not resting normally. See Mining (Bugs) and elsewhere on this article and its discussion page. Temper recipes are found [checking necessary — Where?] for elven gold-plated boots, gauntlets, handlebars and shields, meaning they may have been planned at some point during development. 2008–2006
