Virus meets granny shawl free pattern

You may remember I bought a ball rifle at Sydney Craft Show back in June and started crossing the Granny Shawl virus. You can read about my progress and where to find the model and tutorial on here. I started the project in July and besides finishing it in August. You have no idea how happy I am about that. These kinds of projects are often the ones that get laid aside and become a UFO, but not this time. So how did it turn out? Instead, I think. When I started I'm desperate that the colors haven't changed quick enough, but when it is finished they are just fine. I'm glad that I added the granny panels, as it adds a bit of interest. It was easier to do than it seems, they were just dogs, double crooked and wood (UK theme). I wanted it to be prayed so I could put it as a beetle rather than a shawl. It seems OK on Victoria, so hopefully I'll get some set out of it, but that will be more for next towel. I have a bit of the IAD left on, but I'm not sure if it is enough to do anything much with and it is all a rather similar to very speaking blue to gray. I was shocked at how much I enjoyed doing some bent during the cool months. I have another ball of Caron cake, so there will be more in the future, but once again, that will be for next server..... i think.
