Steam purchase error help

When the Steam store encounters any kind of problem with a purchase you are trying to make, the purchase does not pass and you are presented with an error message that reads: An unexpected error occurred. The purchase is not complete. Please contact Steam Support. An unexpected error occurred. Unlike other Steam errors that prevent you from launching games on the Steam client or installing/updating the games, this error makes an affected user unable to make any purchases of any kind on the platform. Being unable to purchase games from the Steam store can prove to be incredibly angry, which is why this error really has to go. This specific problem can be caused by any of a number of different things. What causes the error message An unexpected error occurred in the Steam store? Some kind of temporary processing issue caused by a hiccup at the end of the Steam client or at the end of the server, or by a problem with your order details, would be the specified billing address. An IP or VPN proxy being in effect. The Steam Store is scheduled to refuse any purchases initiated while the customer's IP address is masked or falsified. Steam servers are responsible for processing game purchases and other transactions that have not been made. There are a number of different solutions that you can use to try and get rid of this error and get the purchase on the Steam store to go through successfully, and that ending up working for you will depend a lot on what causes this problem in your case. 1. Please try the purchase again You may see this error message because of a temporary processing problem or some kind of problem with the order details. In such cases, you should be able to successfully make the purchase by simply retrying one or (a maximum) twice. As you try your purchase again, double-check (and even check the purchase details three times!)—especially your billing information—to make sure everything is in order and there's no reason why Steam is preventing the transaction from passing. However, it is strongly recommended that you do not retry failed purchases more than a few times to avoid overloading the system or sending duplicate requests to the system at the same time. 2. Disable any VPN programs or IP proxies you have running VPNs, IP proxies, and pretty much everything masks or spoofs the IP address of your computer is a big no-no on the Steam store. Steam systems are inherently designed to prevent any purchases initiated by masked or falsified IP addresses from passing successfully, so if you want to make a purchase in Steam, VPN programs and IP proxies will have to pass. Launch the VPN program or IP proxy that you have currently enabled on your computer. Locate the switch or setting to turn the program on and off and turn it off. Turn off VPN If you have a VPN configured locally on your computer, you are going to have to turn it off for the time being if you want to be able to make purchases on the Steam store. You will also need to make sure that any other programs or utilities capable of masking your computer's IP address are not in effect. 3. Wait for the underlying issue to be resolved If none of the solutions listed and described above worked for you, there is a good chance that you will encounter this problem because the Steam servers responsible for processing purchases and other transactions did not work. If that's true, there's really much for you to do, but wait for these servers to come back again, at which point you can try buying again and should successfully complete. Be sure to continue to check the issue while you wait for its underlying cause to be addressed. 4. Contact Steam Support If it seems that you simply cannot get rid of this error message and make a successful purchase in the Steam store, it may be time to call the big guns and contact Steam Support. Make your way to the Help section of the Steam store, where you need to specify the problem you are experiencing and select the purchase that continues to fail. Specify the problem and select the failed purchase Contact Steam Support to find a solution to your problem. The ones at Steam Support are extremely useful and professional (and they're real people, not just automatic answers!), so when all else fails, they should be able to help you get out of this jam and go back to happy making purchases on the Steam store. An unexpected error occurred. The purchase is not complete. Please contact Steam Support. After resetting my PC, I came up with an error message when I try to download the Gold Edition Division. It seems to be happening to a lot of other people. When you try a purchase through the Steam Store, I get the following error message exactly: An unexpected error has occurred. The purchase is not complete. Please contact Steam Support. can I complete the purchase? This error may occur when our system has encountered a problem with the transaction you are trying to make. Test the problem once or twice as much, making sure you enter the correct billing information. Avoid failed spam purchase attempts multiple times. If you continue to experience this error, use the Help site to select the failed purchase and contact Steam Support for support. Turn off or completely remove any IP proxy or VPN software that you are using, restart your computer, and test the purchase again. All transactions that are initiated through anonymous proxies will be refused by the If you are trying to purchase through the Steam website, please try to purchase through the Steam app or vice versa. Turn off or completely remove any IP proxy or VPN software that you are using, restart your computer, and test the purchase again. All transactions that are initiated through anonymous proxies will be declined by Steam. If you can't complete a purchase, contact Steam Support with detailed information, including the name of your Steam account and the exact error message you see. I am currently travelling to another country, and my purchases are declining, can I solve this problem? Make sure that any IP proxy or VPN software you have is disabled and try the purchase using the billing address so it appears in the bank statement. If the problem persists, contact Steam Support and make sure you include your Steam account, the country you're from, and the country you're currently visiting. Steam informed me that my purchase failed, but there is a pending fee on my credit/debit card. Why is that? If the error message you receive when you failed a purchase contains the words temporary suspension, you may have failed an AVS (address check) or CVV2 (3-digit code on the back of the card) check with the bank. In these cases, most banks will still allow the acquisition to pass, setting the funds for the purchase amount aside, despite the fact that this information is incorrect. Steam will always refuse a transaction that fails an address or CVV check. Steam will not collect the funds that the bank has put on hold. Your bank will release your funds at a later date, in accordance with their policy. This can often take up to 10 business days. My prepaid gift card doesn't work with Steam. Why is that? Most gift cards require them to be registered on the gift card issuer's website before they can be used for online purchases. Information about this process can usually be found through a web address that is printed on the back of the card itself. If you did not register the gift card before attempting a purchase, the issuer may have got your hands on the card for the failed purchase amount. This suspension will be removed in accordance with the card issuer's policy, which may take up to 10 business days. The purchase is not complete. The payment processor reported an authorization error. Select a different payment method. Sometimes the Steam client may not work correctly for purchases PayPal To fix this problem, close the Steam client next to the Steam icon on the taskbar, and then right-click Exit Next up, open the Internet browser of your choice, and then switch to the website of Steam Connect to Steam, then add the item to your shopping cart and switch to the pay method Select PayPal and click Continue.
