Martha Grimes (born May 2, 1931) is an American writer of crime fiction. She is best known for a series starring Richard Jury, an inspector at Scotland Yard. Grimes' biography was born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania to William Dermit Grimes, a Pittsburgh city attorney, and June Dunnington, who owned the Mountain Lake Hotel in Western Maryland, where Martha and her brother spent much of their childhood. [1] Grimes earned her B.A. and M.A. from the University of Maryland and did graduate work at the University of Iowa. [2] He has taught at the University of Iowa, Frostburg State University and Montgomery College, Takoma Park. [4] In 1983, Grimes received the Nero Wolfe Award for Best Mystery of the Year for The Anodyne Necklace. [5] In 2012, Grimes was named grandmaster by the Edgar Awards Mystery Writers of America. [3] Grimes initially became known for her series of novels starring Richard Jury, an inspector with Scotland Yard, and her friend Melrose Plant, a British aristocrat who has renounced her titles. Each of the jury's mysteries is named after a pub.[1] His quartet of Emma Graham novels that begins with hotel Paradise is in an atmospheric aging lake complex in western Maryland, and delves into mysteries of past secrets and human nature. The background to the series is based on the experiences she enjoyed spending summers at her mother's hotel in Mountain Lake Park, Maryland. One of the characters, Mr. Britten, is drawn on Britten Leo Martin, Sr., who then ran Martin's Store, which he owned with his father and brother. Martin's Store is a short walk from mountain lake hotel, the site of the former hotel, which was demolished in 1967. Andi Oliver's two novels focus on a young drifter with amnesia, making his way to the northern U.S. Midwest armed with a strong sense of entitness and evil and great compassion. Grimes has donated a large portion of his profits from these novels to animal protection organizations. Grimes lives in Bethesda, Maryland. [3] She is a vegetarian. The fact Read Martha Grimes' books in order is a pleasure for lovers of crime mystery novels. The Richard Jury series has no less than 23 books spanning more than three decades of pure British fiction written by an American. There is a very good reason why the author has been named the 'American Queen of British Mystery'. Martha Grimes (website) was born in 1931 in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Growing up in Garrett County, western Maryland, he spent every summer he could at his mother's hotel in western Maryland. His father died when he was 6 years old. He attended the University of Maryland, where he earned both his bachelor's and master's degrees. While enrolled in the Creative Writing Program at the University of Iowa, she worked on her PhD where she studied to be a poet. Over the years he has taught at several universities in the United States, including the University of Iowa, Frostburg State University and Montgomery College, where he taught English for 15 years. When her first Richard Jury book called The Man With a Load of Mischief was published, Martha Grimes was about 50, working at the time at the University of Iowa as a teaching assistant. Before it was published, it was rejected for several years until it was finally noticed and accepted in 1981.She always loved reading British mysteries, so for her it was a natural conclusion that she would write British mysteries. His books became very popular not only because they are really very good, but also because we are realistic, there are not all too many British mysteries written by American authors together. The other author I can think of is probably P.D. James.As an interesting sidenode, whose names of the jury books come after British pubs. Most of the pub names featured in the books are some that the author has actually been. Martha Grimes admits she was a heavy drinker over the years. However, his drinking never interfered with his writing. Some say, in fact, that it helped them more than one might mind admitting. In 1992 he broke away from writing his successful series to publish a contemporary novel called The End of the Pier. While the jury books are still written, the author has also written several other shorter series, including the Andi Olivier series and the Emma Graham series. The Richard Jury series has been adapted into a television series by ZDF, the German public broadcaster in cooperation with ORF, the Austrian television station, initially adapting the books The Man With A Load Of Mischief and Help the Poor Struggler.Currently the author lives in Bethesda on in his next book. You hear here he is much closer to his family here than to Capitol Hill, where he lived for 23 years. These are Martha Grimes' books for her series of juries, juries, like all the other books he has written. Footnote: The author doesn't like the non-jury series called 'these other books'. However, in most fans' minds, well, they're not jury books, though I personally like them almost as much. Richard Jury series in order1. The Man with a Burden of Deception (Richard Jury #1), 19812.
