Getty Images How much can you really say about a person just from their zip code? According to Esri, a ge geo-information firm, the answer is: quite a bit. Esri's website features a zip search tool that allows visitors to find out demographic information for any zip code in the United States. So while you already know the best states to look for a new home, now you can learn even more about each particular neighborhood to find the one that's right for you. Here's how it works: Esri's tapestry of segmentation divides neighborhoods into 67 different segments based on socioeconomic and demographic composition, in order to provide a snapshot of what life is like in any place. For example, Beverly Hills's famous 90210 zip code tapestry suggests that 73 percent of residents are classified as top tier (aka they're super rich and have everything they've ever wanted), 20 percent are labeled trendsetters (aka they're young professionals who care about the finer things in life), and 8 percent are in their retirement years. Esri And although the site isn't brand new, the summer moving season seems like the perfect time to take a deeper look at the neighborhoods (or neighbors) you're considering. With only 11 states hosting the top 100 zip code, with California leading the pack at 68.To to determine which zip code across the country are priciest this year, RealtyHop took every real estate listing advertised in the U.S. (that's 3.2 million, BTW) and ranked by zip code and median price. Atherton, Calif. (94027) tops the list-as it has on lists from other companies in previous years-with a median listing price of $8.65 million. Los Angeles alone has 10 of the nation's top 100 expensive zip code, which is the most any city has. California contains 68 of the top 100 and follows New York with 20-including Sagaponack, Water Mill, and New York City. This leaves 12 zip code to other states. In addition to the California and New York zip code, Fisher Island, Florida (33109) is second on the list after Atherton. It's the only zip code in the top 10 that's not from those two states. Other zip code that made the top 100 include Media, WA (98039); Alpine, NJ (7620); 1. Greenwich, CT (06830); Paradise Valley, AZ (85253); Kenilworth, IL (60043); and more. For that, we can thank a tv show in Beverly Hills. In addition, the general knowledge of these five-digit numbers is quite limited. We put them at the end of the addresses, and then our mail is miraculously delivered to the right place. But through some cunning detection methods (online research), we have discovered one of the most highly kept secrets of all postal operators to know: what zip code they really are and how they work. (OK, so it's not really a secret, but now you have something to talk to your postman about.) Learn how you can help the USPS right now. Why do we use zip code? The whole practice of using zip code is a relatively new system that was introduced on July 1, 1963. Before that, since 1943, the U.S. Postal Service has used a number of postal zones only for major cities. If you wrote the address, that number would go around the city and in front of the state, and postal carriers used to sort mail more efficiently. See what mail delivery looked like 100 years ago. What does each number in the zip code mean? In 1944, a postal worker named Robert Moon put forward an idea for a new postal zone system that would cover the whole country. The first number would mean for a group of states, starting with zero on the East Coast and ending at nine on the West Coast, and the second and third numbers would specify which sectional center facilities (the place where the post office gets processed and distributed) mail should go in the area. Finally, the U.S. Postal Service adopted this plan, adding two numbers at the end to indicate the correct mail or mail zone, so the zone improvement plan or zip code was born. Check out these other surprising facts about the U.S. Post Office.What do the four numbers at the end of the zip code mean? About 20 years after the first zip code was introduced, the Postal Service made one more tweak to the system: the four digits that come after your zip code. These are a stand for a specific area that each given post covers. The sixth and seventh figures refer to the supply sector, which could be a street group, one large building or another small geographical area. The last two stand for the delivery segment, such as the floor of an office building or on one side of the street. Although the U.S. Postal Service says proper credit for creating a zip code goes to a committee of people, our addresses would look completely different if it weren't for the moon's numerical inspiration. If you didn't know you certainly wouldn't know these 23 secrets your mail carrier won't tell you. Juanmonino/Getty Images by rd.com Peterspiro/Getty Images Like most countries and territories, Israel has a large number of zip, or postal, codes. Israeli postcodes consist of a series of numeric digits that indicate a specific region and city of a specific address. Mail services use code to quickly route mail to a specified recipient. Postcodes in Israel follow a specific pattern that begins in the northern region of the state, with numbers growing gradually for each additional area along that path. The Israeli zip code system follows the same type of numbering as seen in other countries, with one exception. While Israel traditionally monitors the five-digit system, it instead switched to a seven-digit system in 2013. While initially making postcodes more confusing, the idea of the change was to open up the option for more addresses. Under the old five-digit system, the postal service was limited to only 100,000 possible codes. However, 10 million unique postal codes are now possible since the change. The seven-digit postcode system, with a growing population of nearly eight million citizens, was a much-needed change to the salutation system. In order to find a zip code for a specific region or city, the Israeli Post website provides a search engine. Several areas in Israel experience poor or no postal delivery due to under-equipped postal infrastructure, organizations and staff shortages following reforms and budget cuts. Residents of some Israeli cities have raised complaints about late or nonexistent deliveries exacerbated by the shutdown of post offices and mailboxes. The Israeli government approved the partial privatisation of the Israel Postal Company, among other state-owned companies, through the sale of shares on the Tel Aviv stock exchange. The Israeli government retains a majority stake in the Israel Postal Service after the company was privatization. Zillow.com California is a golden state in more ways than one - it's also home to some of the priciest real estate in America. Forbes released its annual list of the most expensive zip code in America, and four communities in California landed among the top 10. Last year, New York had six zip code on its list. He's only three this year. The reason for California's dominance? It's partly a flood of tech money. Three of the top zip code are in Northern California, near Silicon Valley, home to tech giants like Facebook and Google and their executives. But it also has to do with the types of houses. The thing about the Bay Area is that housing supply is ridiculously limited, Michael Simonsen, CEO of Altos Research, told Forbes. And in a city like Atherton, there are no apartments. Manhattan, he added, has a mix of homes, from brownstones to high-rise apartments. To determine the rankings, Forbes is working with Altos Research, a data provider that looks at asking - no sale prices – single-family homes in 28,500 zip code across America for 90 days ending October 9th. She lived on an island that, as we all know from John Donna, there is no man. And as we all know from life experiences, no woman is an island. Especially not determined daughter. Although, I tried to be. I'm a great border designer. I carefully protect Silence and Solitude, two of my other best friends. I'm a woman who needs time alone, like food or oxygen. I built my life around what I think of as my pre-existing condition. My mom-centric/centered life won't let me be quite a loner. And I have friends, I meet them, in my parsimonious, parceled way. We talk, we go, we do, we throw back beer and sometimes we're stew. Having Marcia back in the mix now means a new clubhouse and lots of new laughter. And she likes her loneliness, too. With Marcia, right in the zip code, I have insurance that time alone won't take too much time alone: a gateway drug into isolation. My swing now seems balanced. My mom's house east of me and Marcia's west, I'm focused. With props to the boss, Bruce Springsteen, there is lightness on both edges of town.
