Summarize the strengths and weaknesses of the articles of confederation

Can depend on a strong leader. You are motivated by results and are committed to achieving those results. You're not afraid to be held accountable and hold you accountable to people around you as well. In a sales environment, for Puts, you may have to pay out of your pocket for it, if the business fails. Partners Partners Expectations may arise. Lack of capital. It's not uncommon, it's not uncommon for startups to underfund. Because it's hard to use capital as a new business and equally difficult to predict how much you'll need. It can be difficult to take advantage of the opportunities created by capital constraints, and you also run the risk of running out of cash, making it difficult to buy inventory and pay your employees. Underdeveloped network. Because you're just getting started, you may not have the right content source, the contacts needed to create useful referrals or seek the right advice. This puts you at a disadvantage relative to established businesses with a wide network. Underdeveloped processes. A startup company doesn't have time to develop smooth systems. This inexperience can lead to hiccups and inefficiencies that make your operation less competitive. Because your startup business hasn't only had the chance to stabilize cash flow, establish efficient processes and build a network, you have to compensate for these weaknesses by understanding your weaknesses and playing for your strengths. Be transparent about what you can and can't do effectively, both with your employees and with your customers. Take calculated risks and plan backups for opportunities when things will inevitably go awry. The biggest thing is to be humble and learn from your mistakes. Mistakes.
