Read more Service ded nightmare - coryoverly Brought my Explorer last month for warranty work. I had two items for them to look at and they ended up looking at the whole car. A good thing right? Not. The two items then led to three and then four and finally they had a laundry list of things. The service ded decided to try to see if the warranty company will pay for all these repairs as they did not. Long story short my transfer was one of the points and was originally quote $79 to diagnose. A day or two later that changed to $1200. Then while changing a bearing they broke my control arm and wanted me to pay for it. Mind you that the warehouse was replaced a year ago, which is why it needed it again I'm not sure. The post of departed manager was an absolute nightmare to deal with. Very unprofessional on the phone. I will never deal with them again. She claimed that the control arm was poorly rusty and that's why the aluminum arm went off. Wouldn't you think it should of broke from hitting pot holes here im Erie if it was so bad? After all this, I got a second opinion on their diagnosis and what they originally said was wrong was not which makes me think they are working on commissionthere. On top of the second opinion I also have my inspection license and just took the vehicle for the two items that I knew were covered by the warranty that got fixed. Not only will I never go back and neither will I recommend them to anyone. Was told the next day that the taillight needed to be replaced completely because it was corroded. I explained that I don't care if it's corroded, I had just followed my car to the store in another vehicle and all the lights worked. After delay of several hours for the issue to be reviewed, I received a call back that marker light did not work... funny, no one mentioned that during the initial call, $350 later. I have an inspected car..., however, they also proposed a replacement for the PTU seal in the transfer to the tune of $500+ dollars..... told them that I would have to think about it as I wasn't really comfortable with their honesty at this point. Decided the next day to have the service done, they couldn't schedule it until 3 weeks in the future!! So, we went to another Ford dealer for service.... and they do the job for $288.....DO DON'T have your car service at CHAMPION Ford in Erie unless you have money to burn! Read more
