For those who kicked over the moments they spent making the perfect avatar on Miitomo, not fret, since you can import your prized old possession to this new customer. Despite this, you won't be able to transfer the different outfits you may have worked hard to unlock, which is a bit rough. Go ahead and think of it as a fresh start. The tools currently included do not have the usual ostentatious costumes, but considering their popularity and collectible status in Miitomo, they are sure to make a splash somewhere down the line. For now, you can customize your avatar based on your face, hair, eyebrows, lips, eyes and shape of your mouth, with the ability to include facial hair or glasses for a final touch. As of now, it seems that this tool is of relatively minimal use, since the Switch, which is Nintendo's last and most prominent console, doesn't use Miis much. They are only used as optional user account avatars and somewhat hidden in system settings to get started. However, if you're still contently using your Wii, Wii U, or 3DS, this is a good option to further optimize your avatar, or give yourself a new glow. With Miis seemingly being pushed from the spotlight after several recent Nintendo installments, it's good that these little ones still have a spot of prominence for those who enjoy more of them. With this release so close to E3, there is a possibility that Nintendo may unveil a Mii comeback or at least a more prominent mii presence on Switch. Until then, relax and model yourself a new Mii, as you've probably seen a hot minute since you've done it. What are your thoughts on Nintendo releasing the Mii Maker-based browser? Please share your Miis with us in the comments below! With the mii creator you can customize everything about your character and create the perfect avatar – whether it's a boy or a girl. The Wii Mii manufacturer allows you to Choose from a wide variety of options for each facial feature. At the end of the design process you will have created a carbon copy of yourself or something completely different! Make Your Own Mii Now (Desktop) Create a Super Mii Character (Android) As long as there aren't many editor tools left online to create your mii, flash is still available. The official version of Nintendo's browser that you can use on your laptop/PC appears to have been removed as we can no longer access it. Instead, they seem to only have a guide on how to make their own Mii using the Nintendo Wii U or Switch here. It actually actually a better version than flash one but requires you to create an account to use it. If you've created a fantastic Mii on any family Console on Nintendo 3DS, you can take it to Wii U. Just scan the Mii character's QR code with the GamePad and... That's it! Mii characters created with Wii can be moved to the Wii U during the data transfer process. Save your Mii as a QR code to share with Wii You and Nintendo 3DS users. Choose a pose and facial expression, and create a funny portrait! In Wii U there is room for all your friends and family. You can store up to 3000 Mii characters, including those created in the Mii editor, and nintendo 3DS or Wii transferred and other sources. Nintendo's Mii has been with us since the Time of the Wii and they have been the protagonists of applications such as 'Street Pass' or 'Miitomo', whose servers closed a few weeks ago, as well as appearing in games such as 'Wii Sports', 'Miitopia' and 'Tomodachi Life', among others, or being directly the characters representing our official Nintendo accounts. The different consoles of the big N have offered the ability to customize our Mii as much as we want. However, to make the job easier for all users, from now on you don't have to tweak them from their consoles, but you can do it directly from your computers. That's why Nintendo has launched the Mii Studio app, which you can access by clicking on this link and from which you can create a new Mii. The other options will remain the same as always, being able to change the hairstyle, eyes, nose, mouth, etc., and save it as the new image of our own. However, the app also allows us to select one of our Mii to edit it as much as we want, so you can get to work with it now whenever you want. More about the Mii in VidaExtra VidaExtra
