However, many consumer electronics, including laptops and tablets, are an exception to this rule - you must return these items within 30 days of purchase with the original packaging, though you should still be able to make the return without a receipt. Below, we explain how to return a laptop or tablet to Walmart, whether you bought it in-store or online. Walmart's Laptop and Tablet Return Policy Walmart accepts the return of laptops and tablets within 30 days of the date of purchase (when purchased in-store) or delivery (when purchased online). [1] There is no release fee for these items. When you return a laptop or tablet, bring it to the Walmart customer service desk with the receipt, original manufacturer's packaging, manuals, and all included accessories. [1] If you don't have the receipt, store employees should still be able to complete the return using the company's refund verification process. Keep in mind that without a receipt, your refund will likely be in the form of store credit. [2] If you purchased a laptop or tablet on Walmart.com and you return it to a Walmart store, you should also bring your packing slip. If you don't have the original packing slip, you can sign in to your Walmart.com account, select the order you want to return, and then print the Store Returns receipt. Our article has more information about returning online Walmart orders. Returns without original packaging If you no longer have the packaging materials and/or accessories, Walmart is not obligated to accept your laptop or tablet back even if it is undamaged and you have the receipt (as previously reported). Store associates scan the barcode on the item's packaging to make sure you bought it from Walmart, which is why the packaging is essential. However, store managers may choose to accept or reject individual returns, so it's best to call your local Walmart to ask about returning a laptop or tablet without packaging or with some accessories missing. If you purchased the laptop or tablet online and no longer have the packaging, you can direct your questions to Walmart's virtual help desk.
