RN4243 White AvenueNew York, NY 10013321-415-2252daniel@noe.comNew York, September 25, 2021Cynthia EmployerHiring ManagerGeneral Medical1 Main AvenueNew York, NY 10013Dear Cynthia, as a recent 3.8 GPA BS Nursing graduate at the University of Minnesota. I am excited about the prospect of joining your team at Medical General. During my studies I performed a six-week clinical practice in the various units of Saint Paul Hospital. I've been praised for my performance by the ward director, and it planted a motivation to be an oncology nurse for which I think General Medical would be the perfect place. During my clinical practice I was responsible for up to 12 non-critical patients in the oncology ward, monitoring their vital signs and treatments, as well as providing empathy and consultation. I worked hand in hand with full-time staff, including emergency calls and weekends. I was praised by the ward director, Prof. Jones for improving the mood I brought the patients into my care. I have carried out all my duties with the utmost care and accuracy, a fact to which the director can also testify. I was the best of my class in 10 of the 19 courses I took during my studies. I have had the desire to help people since my father spent 2 years in a coma during my teenage years, but clinical practice in oncology specifically focused on this desire. I think General with a new $17m oncology department and a dynamic research department will be the perfect place for me to grow and provide world-class care. When would a good time to schedule a conversation or interview for us to discuss the challenges you face at General Medical? Best Best J. NoeDaniel expertly uses a mix of academic and internship performance to paint a picture of a perfect candidate, and also one who wants to work exactly there. Do you have to write a résumé? Check out our other special guides: Let's write your own new grad RN cover letter. How to write a new Grad RN Cover Letter that gets interviews1. Sterilizing the Cover Letter FormatOrganized. Neat. Clean. Approachable. That's what a new registered nurse should be. It's also exactly what your cover letter should be. Start with a professional business cover letter format:Next, let's talk about what to include in your cover letter.2. Create a header with your contact informationFor your information, copy your resume header. Leave a line below, write down the location and date of the letter, another room and the details of the person to whom you address the letter. If you don't know who that is, use the phone. It's not a big secret, but it will be a nice touch. Make sure you have this information:Cover letter for new grad RN: Header [Your full name], RN [Your job title] (optional)[Phone number [Email address]] LinkedIn profile (optional)[City and Date [The full name of the hiring manager][The position of the hiring manager][Company name][Company name][City and Postcode]- Expert Hint: You're lucky! The Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts that by 2022 there will be more RN positions than any other profession. Make sure you have a perfect RESUME. Double your impact with a matching resume and cover letter combo. Use our application letter builder and make your application documents pop out. MAKE YOUR COVER LETTER NOWWed to try a different look? There are 18 more. With one click, you get a total makeover for your document. Choose a template for a cover letter here.3. Identify yourself and the positionAddress your cover letter by first name if you are dealing with recruiters. If your application is going to get treated by the doctors, it may not seem appropriate for them. Use the correct medical title and last name to stay on the one side. The first paragraph of your new grad RN cover letter should be more concise than a patient report. Focus on the essential, numerical information that will inform their decision- your GPA and the amount of clinical practice hours you have. If you apply for a graduate program, or a position that requires only a degree and not much else, there will be stiff competition, and a lot of disorganization. Don't waste people's time. When you start your cover letter, please immediately indicate which position you are applying for. You only have a few seconds to get someone's attention, so give them a good reason to keep reading, such as listing one of the most important requirements of and delivering a statistic that proves your aptitude in this industry. Think of performance, prices, numbers. Start with grad RN Cover Letter: IntroductionDear [Hiring Manager's Name],Graduating [School Name] with an [X] GPA in [Degree Name], I'm excited and finally ready to apply to a registered nursing position at [Target Institution Name]. During my studies, I recorded [X] clinical practice hours in the [departments] departments. I also discovered [bubble/motivation/path of specialty], which led to me positions that will allow me to [develop in some way] and I think [Target Institution Name] is the perfect place for that with its [unit/equipment/personnel/reputation/etc.]. Expert Hint: Applying for an internship? It may require a different approach. Write a targeted internship cover letter with our guide.4. Dose them with reasons to choose youThis is the most vital part of your new grad RN cover letter. You need to display a mix of academic prowess and an understanding of the reality of work. Discuss the tasks you've performed that usually belonged to qualified nurses. Think of the times you moved on. Whatever you do, don't rattle off a list of boring responsibilities and procedures you did. It is better to speak in detail about a unique thing that you learned than to rattle off a list of 30 procedures every nurse knows how to do anyway. Like this: New grad RN Cover Letter Sample: Second ParagraphYuw [Target Position Name] position asks for a candidate with a degree in [referring to the requirements of the job]. I not only met that requirement, but excelled in [your best or most relevant coursework]. During clinical practice I gained experience in [relevant experience], as well as [relevant experience]. I can easily translate these skills to help me perform my tasks as [Target Position Name] better. Expert Hint: You look to strengthen the chances of your RESUME with added certifications. The American Heart Association's Advanced Cardiovascular Life Support (ACLS) is particularly large.5. Raise The Pressure, Tell Them Why You Chose ThemYeah, ok, soon enough there will be more registered nurses than any other profession in the US. You have to play the numbers game and you will end up with a job. However, part of playing the numbers game is making each shot count. Spend some time researching the institution you're applying for and find something you relate to yourself and your motivation for. Make them feel like it's the only application you've sent. Fill the [blanks]: New Grad RN Cover Letter Sample: Third paragraphJoining [Target Organization Name] would not only be a perfect opportunity for me to grow by taking advantage of your know-how and [what they do], but also an instant and seamless culture-fit that would benefit if [something you discover about their values] is something that is important to me personally. 6. Ask for an interview and close the deal I look forward to hearing from you. Well, you can stay. Continue. For jobs. Be decisive and ask for a conversation or interview. Find a good talking point to refer here, preferably something from their website. You're no less qualified than other fresh RN grads. If you don't ask, you won't get it. When you're done, sign your cover letter professionally with a 'Best Regards'. Like this:New m Cover Letter Sample: Sign Off & Call to ActionWhen would be a good time to have a call or a meeting to discuss how my [your best, most relevant skill/experience/their most important requirement] experience can help [Target Organization] achieve [something important to this employer]?
