They speak with a human voice. From South Africa and beyond, stories reflect the changes and evolution of characters in different contexts. Aside from the stories themselves, Changes: Anthology of Novel Stories includes a comprehensive set of features: • An introduction that explains the nature of short stories and discusses the general background and themes of text to help learners better understand and enjoy stories • An introduction to each story that provides a background to help guide learners teachers through each short story • Pre-reading activities to prepare learners for reading and guide their understanding of each story • Authors' short stories, storytelling of a biography and explaining the work of each author • Glossary notes for each story that define new words and phrases for learners • Notes and discussion sections to help learners understand literary techniques and help analyze more difficult stories • Questions and activities that help learners develop critical insights into each story. These sections also examine learners' knowledge of the facts of each story and offer creative ideas for individual, couple, group work and classwork. Exam-style questions are added so that learners can practice for exams • A glossary of literary terms on the back of the book that defines and provides examples of literary terms in the whole text • Suggestions for further reading – learners and teachers can read more about authors and their work 17.02.2020 Dermot changes commentary on triumph in front of a adversity kedibone Seku we have a theme of hardship , struggle, fear, ambition and opportunities.
