SHAPE MATTERS Round tables are good for conversation and feel more inclusive, making it easier to talk not only to your closest neighbors, but to everyone. Square and rectangular tables will be arranged neatly with other furniture and can be pushed against the wall if you need space, for example, for a party. Photo: Getty SIZE IT UP As a rule, a square table measuring 90cm x 90cm or round with a diameter of 90 cm, will accommodate four people. For six people, a rectangular table 150cm x 90cm, or a round design with a diameter of 130 cm will work. For eight people, allow the table to be 200cm x 100cm, or 150cm in diameter. Get the right table size for your space. Once you've found the table you like and before you buy, make sure it works in your space. Cut and glue the newspaper sheets to the size of the table and put the template on the floor to give you a sense of how it will fit. Remember that you will need about 60-90 cm from the edge of the table to the nearest wall / furniture, and if you can save 100 cm, there will be even more space for people to walk behind the sitting dining rooms. Consider tables that can be expanded if you want to have a large crowd. Gateleg tables, which have a flap or flaps that fold, are ideal for compact rooms. Check to see if there is enough space when it is at its maximum size. Photo: Getty TWICE AS MUCH AS YOUR table will double as a space to eat and work, you'll need one with a practical, durable surface. For example, a design in advance that can be re-oiled or painted would be better than a lacquered one. Whether you are buying traditional traditional Design or something more suited to your contemporary mid-century flavors, there are endless options in one click. Before you start shopping, just make sure you measure your space, says interior decorator and Author of Rental Style, Chelsey Brown. Brown encourages buyers to map (on the floor) where the table will be made of strip painters. This will give you an idea of how much space the table you are watching will take up. Don't miss the quality, either. One way to do this is to always read reviews first. Interior designer Diana Weinstein of DW Designs points out that functionality and care are also key. For example, do you need it to expand? Where are the legs and how will the chairs fit? What does it need for cleaning and maintenance? Do I need to assemble it? To simplify the shopping process, we combed the internet and read hundreds of reviews to make our list the best of the best. Here the most beautiful tables available online. Rivet, amazon's mid-century design brand, continues to drop jaws with separate home furnishings. This table — a little retro, a little industrial — can function as a table or even a desk. The walnut-trim top floats on black metal legs. Reviewers confirm that the table is solidly built and quite easy to assemble — it takes less than 20 minutes. If you're obsessed with design, you can also add a matching coffee table, side table, or console to fully integrate your living space. While most of us will kill for the original Knoll Saarinen Tulip Table (view of Knoll), unfortunately, it is not always on a budget. Fortunately, this premium reproduction , courtesy of Rove Concepts, is an inexpensive alternative. The trademark single-plinth tulip base is made of strong cast aluminum, which supports heavy, satin lacquer top. While the table is the definition of a mid-century design, it can work in almost any aesthetic, as long as you put a thought in the chairs with which you pair it. If you want to stay true to Sarrinena's vision, order matching tulip chairs. Philadelphia-based interior designer Anita Householder of House Edits is a big fan of stand-style tables. You can always pull up a few extra chairs (side stools, small benches) in the crosshairs when you feed the crowd or house a lot of people - [plus], your legs don't bother all the main properties, he explains. This stand option, from holding Amazon-chic Stone & Beam, looks like it was carefully chosen by Joanna Gaines for one of her top home fixer. Rustic wood has a raw look and style, and the design is finished with fashionable, angular crossed legs. Friends and family will be shocked when they find out that it was not handmade by a local carpenter and was simply ordered online and to your door. Floyd is a furniture company aimed directly at the consumer, which makes life easier for us. Instead of offering plenty of style choices, they focus their efforts on developing one amazing product without thinking in each category. Floyd's table is a perfect example of this. The universal element can be used as a desk or table for up to four people. Featuring linoleum and birch wood tops and powder-coated steel legs, the coolest thing about this table is that it is available in several different color combinations, including our favorite, blush and white. The oval table is a great compromise between square and round options and is an eye-catching way to shape the space boxy. This mid-century table with a pair of sculptural rubber legs with veneered, starburst-style tops that only provides the retro glamour we're after. The table is built to accommodate four to six people, but reviewers note that it is generously sized and can really fit more. Many people are also quick to notice that they do not scratch or stain easily. The Rory-style table in Birchlane is a romantic touch that requires a country-style home. Since it can be ejected, it is a great option for people with smaller dining rooms who need extra seating only for special occasions. The antique table has an extra leaf that transforms it from dining room to six to sit for eight in minutes. Rory's table is made of solid poplar wood and finished with lightly worn whitening, which gives it a shabby chic. If you are looking for a simple but sophisticated mid-century modern table and have a small budget, stop looking and order this table from Zinus Jen as soon as possible. Buyers are shocked to find that this small and economical table makes it in any space. The Zinus table is ideal for small dining rooms and even NYC-sized kitchens, and can also fit a family of four. Reviewers confirm that it is easy to assemble and far exceeded their expectations. It's also available in walnut finish (for a little extra money), but the natural shade is mid-century to the bone. We are slightly obsessed with the CB2 stone collection, which, along with the side table and coffee table, includes this wonderful table. Why? Well, we've seen some more unique options. Designed by Caleb Zipperer, this vintage-inspired piece creatively layers of stone, brass and glass. While the feature is always the main purpose of the table, this dimensional piece basically doubles as an art installation. If you already have a set of show-stopping chairs that you want to be the focal point of your space, opting for a simple and simple table is the way to go. This high-quality, classically designed wooden table from Pottery is an almost empty slate for the dining room. Matteo Extendable table offers faded, distressed finish finish it provides subtle warmth and character that will not overwhelm your space. It also has a butterfly leaf that can transform a six-seater table into an eight-seater table in an instant. Concrete in the dining room? Yes, please. This brilliant sitting situation begins with a sculptural blackened brass base, which is then topped with an industrial-inclined concrete countertop. Effect? Rustic, but sophisticated table. The overall look of West Elm's Tower Dining Table can be softened with the addition of some upholstered seating (we suggest velvet). It's said you can also choose to embrace the table's more masculine look by purchasing matching chairs. One of the more unique tables we've ever seen, Anthropologie's Anya features a smooth travertine upper set above cylindrical hardwood legs. It has a truly organic character, so it will add instant visual interest to your space without overwhelming your existing décor. At 29.5 x 48 inches, Anya is small enough to have a compact dining room, but large enough to accommodate four to six people. We offer to pair it with an upholstered chair. Hooker is one of our favorite made-in-America furniture companies and this gorgeous retractable table is an example of their superior craftsmanship. The timeless architect-style décor is inspired by both French antiques and traditional farm décor. Of course, the table prioritizes the function next to the form; comes with two 18-inch leaves that can extend it to a whopping 122 inches in length. If you are looking for an excuse to organize more dinners, this is certainly the case. It.
