Research, politics, law or communication would be of interest to it. A career in the media or radio would be particularly suitable as a slippery talker and energetic presenter, talk show host or fast disc jockey. At the end of this semester, I will have to go to a place where I will be a trainee. I study journalism, so this place is quite attached to the history of the communication and media part. In fact, it was about the work of my other partner, and I was thinking about what to do if I found him there? The place where I'm going to be a trainee... o.o Only time will tell, but I'm really curious now! All the best and don't forget to live every day in top #12 ah, this card came to me a career reading a couple of years ago, and I was completely stumped at the time. As it happened, I wound up getting a job teaching the composition of law enforcement recruiting during the same month I read! Not what I expected because I'm not law enforcement kind of gal. I teach writing as a profession, but that particular job just got into my circle in the wrong way. What I got from that sword knight reading was 1) speed, 2) communication, and 3) professions related to the fight for their beliefs or rights... in my case, this leads me to the law enforcement academy. Go picture. Top #13 quote: Originally published as Starrystarrynight One also appears in military or police work. I agree with this because there is a way of fastidiousness that the Knight of Swords identifies, and there is always some way of being attached to his thinking. He wants to make sure everyone keeps the rules! So a lawyer or editor could really apply as well.
