Page 1 of 2 More Ice Cream recalls articles If your favorite about summer is ice cream, then get ready to have your world shaken. Dreyer's ice cream has come up with such genius ideas, we can't believe we've lived so long without them: Instead of serving ice cream in a bowl (boring!), the people of Dreyer have figured out a way to make edible bowls of biscuits, brownies, apples, and even lemons. And to go a step further, they also devised a brilliant way to use ice cream as cupcake ice cream (!). Does it all sound too good to be true? Here's what I had to say: Every year, even before summer officially begins, comes a warm, sunny, spring day and everyone seems to be out with an ice cream cone in hand. The beautiful weather seems to serve as an invitation to enjoy a cold treat. For me, every season is worthy of ice cream. If they attack the freezer or stop at a local store, I treat myself to an ice cream cone almost every day of the year. So when Sharon asked me to give the KitchenAid Ice Cream Maker Attachment a whirlwind, I was excited that I would be able to make ice cream on my own terms. For my first attempt, I tried a simple, classic flavor that my mom and dad always kept in the house during the summer: piece of chocolate with mente. Following the step-by-step instructions of a recipe book, I prepared a mixture of cream, milk, eggs, sugar, mente, and a few drops of green food coloring (I wouldn't be piece of chocolate with pment without it!), and let it cool in the fridge overnight. The next morning, I set up a KitchenAid mixer in the lab with ice cream attachment. After pouring the cold base into the machine would already suck, I noticed that almost immediately began its metamorphosis in ice cream. And after only five minutes, the blender began to make a loud click noise to indicate that the ice cream was ready. Sure, what I had in front of me was a batch of the richest and creamy chocolate chip I'd ever seen. Exercising supreme self-control (well, I licked the churn), I followed the signs and cured the ice cream in the freezer for a few hours before eating. Let me tell you that the chocolate chip with pment never tasted so good! The Ice Cream Maker Attachment ($99) can be used with all Model KitchenAid mixers. Basically it consists of a mixing bowl with a gel inside that helps you to cold after cooling it in the freezer and a churn that sticks to the mixer instead of the blenders. The most important thing is that the bowl should be placed in the freezer at least fifteen Before deciding to make ice cream and the longer the bowl is frozen, the faster your ice cream will be ready. The owner's manual guided me visually and textually through the easy process of turning the mixer into an ice cream maker and even included tips for making the perfect ice cream. If you don't have a blender or an ice cream maker, you can still make your own homemade ice cream. Click here for lots of delicious machineless recipes from our test kitchen. Place the glasses in the fridge while you prepare the rest of the floats. This releases some of the carbonation so you don't shoot too much when you add the ice cream. Spruce eats / Leah Maroney Add sugar, cinnamon and water to a small saucepan. Cook, turning the pan from time to time until the mixture has thickened, about 2-3 minutes. Remove from the pan from the heat and let it cool while preparing the whipped cream. Spruce eats / Leah Maroney Add the heavy cream to a bowl and whip with a hand blender until soft peaks form. Then whip in the powdered sugar until just combined. Not about mixing or you'll end up with butter instead of whipped cream. Spruce eats / Leah Maroney Add two to three balls of ice cream to each glass. Spruce eats / Leah Maroney plug the cinnamon syrup on top. Then top with the whipped cream and cherry and serve immediately, with a straw and a long spoon. Spruce eats / Leah Maroney d There are many different variations for ice cream floats! Traditionally a dark soda such as root beer or tail is used, but it can also be made with lemon-lime, orange soda, or even ginger ale. Vanilla ice cream is traditionally used, but you can also try other flavors. Chocolate ice cream works well with dark soft drinks and strawberry or other fruit ice cream forwards work well with lemon lime soft drinks. It can also be mixed with different syrups. We love cinnamon syrup with root beer because of the spicy root beer. But it could also be paired with chocolate syrup (sometimes referred to as a black cow). Add in vanilla syrup or strawberry syrup if you are using lemon-lime soda. Soda.
