The player controls a robot to move around a huge map, collect power up and finally aim to reach the fish in the bowl. The game features 8 bit style pixel graphics and voice effects. The robot starts without any capabilities rather than being able to move left and right. Collect power-ups scattered around the map to gain capabilities like bombs, double jump, mould, swimming etc. The surface is designed in a way that will give every power-collecting player access to new parts of the map. For example, you first collect a bomb power, by fighting enemies you can reach the power to adapt. Double jump allows the robot to reach the ability to swim. The water water contains harpoons and bombs. The map breaks into 6 parts achieved with the taalporter in the middle of the map. Crabs are enemies, bat, cancrele, robot, jelly fish and an owner enemy in every part who is older and regularly kills more than small enemies. It contains computeron substances that work as check points, will end up rasponing the robot in the final check point and will add a total of 20 seconds. Reaching the end goal in the fastest time is a sub-goal of the game. Other elements include stompars, box, turrets, green shares for extra time etc. Collect the key to opening the doors of the fish. Later in this game, blocks and khans can be destroyed using the force of the bomb.
