If your pet is diagnosed with an ear infection (otitis), Epi-otic is a great cleanser to prepare and clean the ear canal for veterinary treatment. It works really well to remove dead tissue, excess wax and dirt from your pet's ears making them beautiful and clean and odorless. Epi-Otic is safe to use twice or three times a week in dogs and cats. For routine ear cleaning & hygieneRemove slack enahalfed wax, dirt & dead tissueControls bad odors from the earsPretreatment for cleaning & preparing the ears for treatments for ear infectionsTIPDoes Your pet often swim? If a small amount of water remains in the ear, it can predispose it to developing an ear infection. After swimming, dry your dog's ears well with a towel or even gently blow them dry on a cool environment. Then use ear linen regularly, once or twice a week to keep your ears clean. Image not available forColour: for: May 2, 2016 News 65 points 19 Just cleaned Archie ears for the first time. I used Epi Otic on a cotton ball. Now, about 30 min. later, his ears are super red. He's asleep, so I can't tell if it bothers him, but I'm pretty worried. Does this seem to be an allergic reaction? Joined May 2, 2016 News 65 Points 19 Check Out My Poor Baby! I wonder if I used too much on the cotton ball? Should I wash it off after I use it? I did not take clean cotton balls with water and lightly rub his ears to try to avoid any transgression. Connected Dec 24, 2011 News 4,774 points 618 Sure sounds like an allergic reaction. Your veterinarian can help you find a hypoallergenic cleaner. I hope that your baby's ears will recover very quickly. Good luck with that! I never washed the ear cleaner from the ears of our cats, and we didn't have this problem. It sounds like a reaction of some kind. Joined February 11, 2013 News 12,089 points 653 @linathehuman his ears look very red. I think if you used the water on cotton balls, that would be something I would have done if my baby's ears had gotten so red from the ear cleaner. Do not rub it and irritate it, just make sure that the water is completely ripped out so that no water is in its ears. If his ears are very red tomorrow, call your veterinarian. Hopefully what they do for him will calm the redness. Poor treasure. Reactions: linathehuman Joined May 2, 2016 News 65 points 19 Almost back to a normal color now. I definitely had a little moment of panic there. Didn't be normal at all. Will definitely not use this ear solution again on the little Archie. I also felt bad for you because all you wanted to do is clean your baby's ears and you ended up panicking. I fully understand that. Ok, you can sleep well tonight, Archie is good now. By the way, did you use round cotton balls or the flat, rounded pads? Joined Feb 11, 2013 News 12,089 points 653 I would ask my veterinarian to recommend a cleaner. Here is a cleaner I looked up, which is hypoallergenic the ingredients are natural, You might want to try. PurestPets OM-NS02-SGMK Ear Soothing Solution Ear Cleaner Dogs and Cats 8-ounce - Walmart.com @Hairless Blessing my favorite ear cleaner was Petco brand and it had only a few ingredients in it. No dyes. No fragrances. Easy. For some reason, they stopped doing it. Now I can only find ear cleaners that have colors, fragrances and too many ingredients. I'm not going to use them. I found an ear cleaner in Target a few days ago. It seemed very simple, but there was a I've never heard of it, and I always make sense to explore it. Besides, I have to call my vet and ask if it's okay to use it on my kitten because for some reason it says it's for dogs. I don't see any comparable from this company that is for cats. So it's exactly this questionable ingredient that I need to check and make sure it's cat-proof. I also clicked on the link you posted above, and I think they also say it's for dogs. But what I didn't like was that it has eucalyptus in it. I can not see that in the ears of a sphynx cat only in case when its oils come out of their ears... to their eyes, it would probably burn. Not really sure about it, but I think about a lot what if a lot of time. I then, use a few q tips to see the small columns I can see. With Eli-Optic. But I think a q-tip, with warm water, would also clean this. Izmae's not going to be that bad. Reactions: Hairless Blessing Joined Apr 23, 2012 News 19,379 points 653 653 , oh Archie - we understand Sensitive ears here also Glad his ear color is tto normal again - My veterinarian has made me addicted to Trizultra with Keto for ear cleaning - she sells in the office and is also available online to buy Trizultra with Keto Otic Flush for cats, dogs and horses It can be used on skin nicks I like. I have advanced Epi otic and switched to Triz ultra for all pet ears - I have been using it for over 10 years. It seems to keep the ears cleaner for longer than the epi otic advanced and without redness. I flush not ears - just wet a flat cotton round, qTips and love precision qTips (ideal for the small outer edge ear flap to gently swirl gunk out) I have also used vetericyn spray on a cotton round wetted, qTip, precision qTip- Vetericyn makes an ear cleaner even in a small bottle that is quite suspicious to be suspicious , think years ago I tried the Epi otic advanced via the regulator Epi otic because of the ingredients I need to recheck) Let us know what cleaner your veterinarian suggests It looks like Archie had a reaction to the Epi otic otic
