It's only four short months until the game closes, but the English Patch for Frontier was finally created. I'll give you some basic information about the fix and why it's being created now, but if you'd rather just get to download it right away and check out Frontier, feel free to skip the links at the end. Taiwanese game server is free to close in December and only a few monsters are missing, which are exclusively on the Japanese server. You can still do most of what the game offers, including 80+ exclusive monsters in the game, so now is as good a time as anyone to jump in. So... Why hasn't there been an English Patch before? The game came out 12 years ago, so why wasn't there been translated for a while. The database on the English information website fist.moe even has English translations on most subjects and all monsters and skills. The problem is that the implementation of these translations into the game was pointless. For some reason, Capcom Online Games (the creators of Frontier) really don't want to cheat anyone. So the game has an anti-cheat system in place called GameGuard. GameGuard checks each game file for tampering every time you play and probably flags any accounts with changed files to ban. It would be pointless to make an English patch beforehand, because anyone who used it would probably be banned and thus not be able to play the game. So why create now? Because the situation has changed. Few people outside the Frontier community know this, but before the game server. Taiwanese game server has always been a few updates behind the Japanese version, and the break started with only two updates before the big ZZ update. Initially, we assumed they were going to combine the two updates together, but then the break lasted about six months and basically killed the Taiwanese base of players, including many members of the English community. Even now there are only about 50-60 players on average on all Taiwanese servers. It seems that the Taiwanese developers learned about the closure of the game is sad, it has become a great opportunity to finally make a fix. It's likely that developers either don't pay attention to the scam because they're no longer working on Frontier, or they just don't about how people modify a dying game. It's been more than two weeks since we first tested the patch and so far no one has been banned. Who created the fix? The patch was almost exclusively made by Fist, a longtime English player and creator of the English website fist.moe. Several regular Frontier players, like me, have also helped shorten some item names to fit the game's limited text boxes, but besides, Fist has translated everything and created the patch himself. What does this explain? Almost all important things. All monster names, almost all menus, most items, basically all needs. The patch is still being developed, but less important things like taste text and armor (because there are so many) will not be translated. Is there a risk of using it? So. While it's likely that TW developers won't care, even if they continue to check these things, using the patch will still carry the risk of a lockdown. It has been tested, but only very lightly in the short term. If you don't want to use it, the game is still 100% playable without. I would like to see some examples of the patch! Here are some examples of the patch! Here are some examples of the patch without. //files.catbox.moe/rf2hgt.jpgSo, how to configure it? Just follow the instructions on the site to make it work with frontier installation. If you have more questions, or just want to hang out with the rest of the English community, you can join the Discord server here. Edit: Thanks so much for the gold! I didn't expect it at all.
