Usb christmas lights for computer

© 1996-2015, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates this is an elegant project to spice up any computer area. if the USB cable is left connected, when the computer turns on and off the lights it will turn on with the computer. It's nice to turn on your computer and have the light desk up! Also, this was my first indestructible and hopefully they will get better from here on = P I started with a battery operated set of Christmas lights, and the male end of a USB cable. I cut the c battery holder, taking care to mark which wire was positive and which was negative. Honestly, this may not matter in this case, but I wasn't completely sure, and I'm a better place to be safer than the sorry guy. I stripped the ends of the wires and twisted them to keep them together. Then I stripped the outer shell from the USB cable and located the red and black wires. These are the only ones we're going to need. If you follow me, strip them, too. for an enclosure, I chose -- of course -- a graft box. it, however, is the first project I've seen inside a small tin altoids. (at least that's something) oh, I also use a small switch switch and some soldering and what not. It's that time of year again to massively over-decorate your home inside and out with dazzling holiday lighting, but what about your computer? It's the 21st century and we spend our lives in front of these cars, so why not cover them in Christmas lights too with these new usb usb new Christmas lights. Yes, that's right, now you can safely light up your computer, cubicle or office space in full-blown holiday spirit using this 6 foot string of 18 LED lights powered exclusively by a USB port. Pick up a few sets if you have extra USB ports to go really crazy with decorations. As an Amazon Associate I earn from qualifying purchases. This helps support the site. Thank!
