1897 trench gun bayonet lug

Winchester 97 only, remove the clamp that holds the magazine tube and barrel together (this clamp will no longer be used). For Winchesters only, if your magazine plug doesn't have a 9/32 stud at the end of it you should replace it with one that does to support your magazine tube. We sell them on our website. Remove the 3 fastening screws from the attachment and slide the bayonet attachment onto the barrel until the 9/32 stud at the end of the warehouse plug goes into the hole in the back of the leg on the attachment and the back of the leg is flush with the face of the magazine plug. This is just for Winchesters. For Stevens and Ithaca slide the fastening on the barrel until the end of bayonet lug (round stud that the bayonet ring glides over) is even with the muzzle end of the barrel. Leaves about 1/2 inch barrel that shows. Ensuring that the leg of the bayonet attachment is lined up with the trigger guard (centered) writer 3 marks in the bottom of the barrel by inserting a small rat tail file into each of the 3 screw mounting holes. Remove the attachment and file each groove just enough to have the screw erased (you do this by sliding on and removing the fastening and screws in the screw until it clears. Do this for all 3 screws. Be careful not to allow the slots to be too deep which could weaken the vessel. The screws should easily clear the vessel without forcing it when the groove is deep enough. Trying to force the screw can strip and or damage the wires in the attachment.
