(January 2015) (Learn how and when to remove this template report) OrkoMasters from the universe's characterOrko as he appeared in He-Man and She-Ra Christmas Special.Created byFilmationVoiced byLou Scheimer (1983-1985)Gabe Khouth (2002-2004)In-Universe informationSpeciesTrollanRelsativeDree Elle, Uncle Montork Orko / &amp; Is a fictional character from the Universe franchise Masters. [1] He was not part of the original toy collection on which the show is based, but when he was created by the show's writers as a comic relief, his toy figure was made. Orco appears in the 1980 filming series He-Man and the Master's Universe and the 2002 remake of the series. The character was named Gorpo in the early initial series of projects, but he was renamed Orco (his original name was used in a Brazilian Portuguese dub from the original series). Character information orko is Trollan, a race trade from Trolla, the world in another dimension. Trollans wear red robes, red hats, and hide their faces under hats and behind scarves. In Trollan society, showing your face to each other is considered an intimate act, similar to people sharing a kiss. A production drawing of Orko without his hat showed him resembling a little blue elf, but it was never used in the series. Orko doesn't reveal his face in the episode Dawn of Dragoon, but his face is not visible to the audience, although his shadow indicates that he is naked. Trollans seem to have blue-skinned humanoids with pointy ears. However, their legs remain hidden under their robes. Trollans have natural magical abilities, including levitation, which they use only, not walking. In one episode, Orko temporarily loses power to levitation, and can be seen crawling around his knees. However, some Trollans have more magical power than others; Orco's uncle, for example, is a noted magician. Orco knows that He-Man's true identity. [2] Orko has always had problems with his magical forces. The recurring joke in this series is that almost every time he tries to use magic, it backfires in some amusing way. The reason for this is unclear; one episode, it is recommended that works with the laws of nature, which is the opposite of Eternia's, and that Trolla, Orko was a good magician. However, in later episodes this contradicts, and Orco has proved equally ignorant even for Trolla. Another episode indicates that Orko owned a magic pendant that allowed him to use magic properly, but that he later lost it. The amulet later appeared stuck on the back of the dinosaur resurrected by the Skeletor. When Orko returned to the amulet to erase the events, it would go back to the dinosaur before it all happens. In addition to his magic spells, Orko also stores an impossibly large plethora of items, some useful, some not so useful, inside his hat. Orco arrived in Eternia when a cosmic storm accidentally transported him there. He appeared in the Tar Swamp, where he found a young Prince Adam and his pet Cringer, at that time a tiger cub, and rescued them both from the dying tar. However, he lost his pendant in the process after colliding with a tree. Stuck on Eternia, Orko was at the Royal Buffoon with King Eternia's gratitude for being his son. Orko became one of Adam's closest friends; in fact, Orko knows that Adam is secretly a He-Man, it's revealed in season one episode of one of the masters of the universe that Orko followed Prince Adam's Castle greyskull, thus knowing He-Man and Prince Adam's true identity. Orko often annoys Man-At-Arms because his magic is constantly backfiring whether Orko finds himself in his lab unexpectedly and uninvited and messing with his equipment that gets to the man-at-arms nerves rather than amusing him as it does to others. Orko has proven to be a good friend and valuable ally, despite his unpredictable powers and the fact he is more than a little clueless. Sometimes Orko asks how useful he is to He-Man, but despite his apparent cowardice, he never helps those in need. Also throughout the series, Adam/He-Man is constantly in Orko's debt saving his life when he was a child. On two occasions, He-Man has helped Orko regain his magical powers. Orko returns to Trolla, with the help of others, on several occasions. For the first time, he helps He-Man save the life of several Trollans captured by one of Skeletor's allies, a humanoid dragon named Dragoon, and begins a romance with a Trollan girl named Dree Elle. However, he decides that his place is now Eternia, and so he returns there. However, he still occasionally visits his friends and relatives in Trolla. The 2002 series of the 2002 series Orco is essentially the same with a slightly more complex costume. It is revealed that he and Cringer followed Prince Adam's Castle grayskull and watched him transform He-Man for the first time. Orko then follows He-Man and the new Battle Cat into battle and almost reveals He-Man's identity to Teela and other Masters, despite being warned by both the sorcerer and He-Man on.&lt; Fortunately, Man-At-Arms, who recognizes He-Man as the alter ego of Adam, quickly steps in and stops him, informing Teela and other Masters that the young hero is He-Man and that the sorcerer had told him He-Man was coming in advance. In the series Orko was a very powerful magician, but when he arrived at Eternia and saved Prince Adam, he lost his wand, which was necessary to control his magic. Since his arrival in Orco is a king's palace jester, and although he has a good y like, few take him seriously. Orco always wants to become the great magician he once was, without his wand to control his magic, he is prone to causing havoc around the castle. However, there have been cases where Orco has played a huge role in the battles. In an episode of Lesson, he managed to successfully disarm the Skeletor from Ram Stone. In an episode of The Last Stand, Orko managed to escape capture by the Skeletor Council of Evil and returned Prince Adam's power to sword him. Flashback episodePower of Grayskull, which reveals the history of Adam's predecessor King Grayskull, who is going in search of power to defend Eternia, where Grayskull encounters Oracle, which looked and sounded a lot like Orko, suggesting that other trolls might find their way to Eternia. Comics In Marvel/Star Comics, Orko was more or less similar to his animated colleagues. In the DC series, DC Universe vs. Universe Masters, at a time when The Skeletor had taken over Eternia, Orko discovered that skeletor had Skull Power, and tried to destroy it, but unfortunately Orko's spell backfired. Orko got blasted with full force of evil inside the skull. Orko absorbed the worst of the skull and it unlocked his mental barrier, giving him the power unspared of. It came to the cost of his humanity, and made him a Mad God. So when Skeletor defeated He-Man, Dark Orko used his power to transport the Skeletor to Trolla, Orko's home dimension. There Dark Orko had transformed Trollans into monsters, and he used his power to transform the Skeleton into something stronger, and sent him to Earth. There Dark Orko commanded the Skeletor siphon of Earth magic and funnel it to him trolla. The skeleton obeyed, and when He-Man, Teela and Evil-Lyn appear, Dark Orko kidnaps Superman, traps him with Trolla, and replaces him with a copy of what He-Man accidentally kills, thus turning the earth's heroes toward the masters of the universe. While Masters fight heroes of the Earth, Dark Orco tortures Superman on Trolla. When He-Man arrives at Trolla, Dark Orko turns to the Skeletor for help, while skeletor turns on Dark Orko, pulling the wizard off Trolla on Earth. There Dark Orko fights with earth heroes and masters of the universe. So when Superman and He-Man destroy Skull Power, Skeletor attacks Dark Orco, forsuing him to places unknown. Then, He-Man swears rest until orko's soul is cleaned from evil. Live-action Orko will appear in the upcoming live-action He-Man movie. In the film Orko will be reimagined as a little man whose self-doubt holds him back from being a reasonably mediocre wizard. [3] Other Trollans Other members of the Orco race who appeared on the Universe masters show include: Dree Elle - Orko's girlfriend, appearing in episodes of Dawn of Dragoon, Dree Elle's Return, Trouble in Trolla and Bitter Rose, as well as She-Ra: Princess of Power episode Magic Greatest. Yuckers – Dree Elle's prank playing the younger brother of Dree Elle's Return. Uncle Montork - Orko's uncle, from episodes of Orko's Favorite Uncle. The Return of Orko's Uncle and Trouble in Trolla, as well as the She-Ra episode of Greatest Magic. Snob - misguided Trollan wizard, appearing in the episode Of Trouble Trolla. Prankster / Wakrapanike - a member of the contestants Trollans, which stands out with practical jokes that appear in the episode Of Trouble's Middle Name; only Trollan do not hide his face. Spongee – An Orco friend from episodes of Orko's New Friend, identical to Orko aside wearing a pilot's helmet, known for concocting tall tales. Doctor Zoog – an evil Trollan scientist who believes that Trolla should drive machines, not magic. He appears in She-Ra: Princess of Power episode Greatest Magic. Oracle - all knowing Oracle from an episode of Power of Grayskull from the 2002 series; lived in ancient Eternia in a flashback sequence. Oracle is the only trollan without Orko to appear in the modern series. In a cultural reference episode of the television series Robot Chicken, after seeing He-Man dead after the Beast Man killed him with his axe, Orko used his sword to become a powerful and defeat skeletor and his minions singlehandedly. When the sorcerer wanted to take He-Man back to Castle Grayskull to bring him back to life, Orko kills him with his sword so he can stay strong instead of regressing to the court jester again. In an episode of I'm Trapped, Orko appeared as a partygger at King Randor's birthday party when Faker (who was mistaken for the real He-Man) showed up. Claiming Faker was cold, Orko offered him some hot coffee only for Faker to spill it into Orko's hood. In an episode of Major League extraordinary gentlemen, Orco fumes are stuck in an elevator with Snarf from thundercats and ridicules his habit of repeating his name after each sentence. In Imaginationland, an episode of the television series South Park, Orko appears as a resident dimension of the same name. In this episode, all the fictional characters created by the human mind live in Imaginationland. The character Gwildor (played by Billy Barty) was created specifically for the live-action film as a replacement for Orco, whose design was complex to the studio to produce live action with its limited budget. Frederick S. Clarke explains that Gwildor was reportedly a stand-in for orko... In this series, Orko has no legs or legs and is always seen floating or flying, a difficult concept movie to live.
