[that] soon he will learn to read (Polacco, 1998, n.p.). However, it soon turns out that unlike drawing, reading does not come easy trisha. And as is often the case in many scientific environments, Trisha, a non-reader is mishandled and is ashamed. Much like leo the late bloomer (Krauss, 1994), Trisha benefits from loving support and quiet encouragement from her caregivers. Polacco's story reminds those who have children, especially the young students in our job, to be good listeners, to recognize and appreciate what they can do well, and to gently guide and support them in learning to do things they can't easily do.
