The wait has now reached its peak, in England and America standard receipts for the first weekend of programming has been crushed, with incredible rows outside the halls. Reason? Well, certainly millions of copies sold from Rowling's books, then the social phenomenon (try to say the name harry potter in the school category and see what happens) not least the rampant card game, which, if possible, almost manages to be more successful than books and movies (Pokémon docet). The plot, for very few who don't know her, revolves around the story of a boy, Harry Potter, who when he finishes his eleventh compleYears receives an invitation letter from Hogwarts, University of Wizards. A sudden event to say the least, as much as it is a mysterious Haggard (Robbie Coltrane/Golden Eye and The World Is Not Enough), a huge young man and gruff, accused of accompanying him. But this is only the beginning, Harry will discover a kind of world parallel to what he knows, inhabited by people who, like him, can practice magic. What is even more shocking is the realization that he is the most famous person in this whole society. The film Chris Columbus (My Mother Missed the Plane), which benefited from rawlings' advice, is very faithful to the novel on every side. Places, characters, dialogues, attitudes, everything follows the work of the writer, perhaps too much. While this proves to be one of the strengths, showing what viewers already imagine and avoiding shock, on the other hand is the weak point in the film. The rhythm of the book is certainly different from a film, and two and a half hours of Harry Potter can be particularly excessive for a very young audience. In addition, the first long part is basically about Harry's amazement at his new status and the small gags that are created among the young characters. The director stays for a long time close to the heroes and on the script hogwarts punishing the rhythm of the narrative. Just later do not insert an exciting note and the ambiguity of increasing viewer engagement. exceptional sets and special effects, but not too invasive in their constant presence, of The level of beautification of everything. The great casting is the ice on the cake. Daniel Radcliffe perfectly embodies the son of potters, as well as Robert Grint and Emma Watson as Ron Perfect and Hermione. Richard Harris (Gladiator) as Albus Dumbledore, Alan Rickman (Robin Hood) as Snape, Ian Hart (Earth and Freedom) as Raptor, and Maggie Smith (Tea with Mussolini) as Professor McGranitt. Success guaranteed, the second film is already in production, so I just wish you a good vision. Phrase: Did you know... Do you know I'm a magician? Fun fact: Many adult actors, such as Alan Rickman and Richard Harris, accepted the hYears segment mainly because of the incredible pressures of children and grandchildren.
