Tiger claw for sale

Includes shipping and handling – shipped overnight – after payment received tiger claw and gold double claw claw & gold pendant recently I have this double tiger claw and gold pendant. See the photos and video. It's super cool, a particularly interesting piece of jewelry. I can't confirm the source on this, but chances are it's Victorian Raj, or a name about an era, and the Indian subcontinent. The two claws back-to-back are most likely from Tiger. I can't confirm that either. If not, they're safe from some larger roaring cat-type predator, such as a tiger. Very amazing stuff. I don't want to be wounded with such evil tools. That would be very unpleasant. Gold hat and tip material is 18K gold, with ruby accent stones. One side has a pattern. The other side is basically simple. You can see it clearly in the video. The total mass is 9.8 grams. The gold cover mass estimate is 4.5 grams. See images for dimensions. In terms of situation, you're better off making your own judgment based on the photos and video. What you see is what you get. But is there anyone who wants to at least appreciate Victorian-era jewellery? If you like gold, I'm sure you'll love this 18K gold leopard claw pendant that's an authentic vintage leopard claw set in 18K gold. I don't know the exact age of the piece, but it looks Victorian Raj in design and production. The 18K gold setting has a very detailed chimera or dragon on each side. Maybe one side is male, the other side is the female. In the foreground are five detailed petal design, perhaps chrysanthemum. I set out to say that the diamond is a Victorian Raj Tiger Cleo pendant that I have seen many similar items online, and also because of design and material features. This 18K gold and Tigger Cleo jewel was most likely made in India or England. Lion and tiger claws were, and still are some of the best big game hunting trophies. The main advantage is that a leopard or lion claw can be worn that is held by a nicely designed gold setting. Big game hunters have put on this kind of gold pendant for their social events. Given how elaborate it is setting 18-carat gold on the diamond shown on this page, it must have been from a very wealthy man. It's made of two parts: gold décor and an authentic leopard claw. It seems to me that A claw pendant was designed for some colonialist Englishman, or any such rich person. The feel of this gold jewel is very Victorian, but 1980s sure to give it an Asian edge. That's why I think this item is Victorian Raj originally. The 18K gold setting is very detailed. Ymeras and flower décor are highly relieved, with hair, eyes, tongs and scales clearly evident. There is a background with an individual texture perhaps coated with 22K on top of 18K to add contrast. The tiger claw itself certainly came from very large cats. He's got signs of using hunting. That claw definitely killed animals. There's no doubt about it. The images displayed in this drawing do not do this pendant justice. Specifications: Total weight 15.9 grams of gold mass estimated at 6 grams estimated tiger claw mass 8.9 grams dimensions are 1.12 high, top width (gold setting) is 1.14, maximum thickness is 3/8 item located in Portland, Oregon, where there is no dime. Maybe you want to pick it up in person. If you are into Victorian jewellery, you are sure to enjoy this piece very much. An exact source I make my best guess as to the origin of this Tris Cleo pendant being Victorian Raj. I looked around. I'd say there's more than a 95% chance the piece is Victorian Raj. This means it dates back to when the English were india like a colony. I can always be wrong. Please do your own research if it's important to you. Materials The definition of this leopard claw pendant is 18K. I buy specialist gold, have all the necessary tools and knowledge to confirm it. The claw is safe of a giant roaring cat. However, I'm not a zoologist, so I can't find out the exact species. Based on the size of the claw, it belonged to a tiger or a lion. Nothing smaller than that.
