Conception can be done on purpose or by a happy accident. Learn what happens during conception and what you can do to promote conception when you try to get pregnant. A scholarship is a gift of money or financial support to help students pay college costs. Students are not required to repay scholarships. Deeper definitionStudents commonly use the term scholarship to mean free money used to help defraud college tuition and other costs. A student can be awarded a scholarship for one of many reasons: to maintain a high grade average or to be from a particular state or with a particular ethnic background. Scholarships can be awarded by both colleges and external organizations. Many scholarships are rewarded through a competition or on the basis of results. Depending on the organization sponsoring the scholarship, applicants may be asked to write an essay, complete a questionnaire, or submit content. Once the application process is completed, a winner is selected and the funds are paid out. Scholarships are often used interchangeably with grants because no form of financial support requires you to repay the money. But there is an important difference between the two: Grants are needs-based, while scholarships are mostly merit-based. Scholarship examplesThe biggest source of grant-giving is the federal government. State governments can also fund grants and scholarships for their residents who attend state colleges. Colleges can fund grants as well, but may have stricter qualifications to receive this financial support. Scholarships come in all shapes and sizes: Academic scholarships: Also called merit scholarships, academic scholarships are prestigious, awarded to students with outstanding academic performance and extracurricular engagement. Athletic scholarships: These scholarships are awarded to student athletes who excel in their sports choices, such as soccer, baseball, golf and volleyball. Average academic achievement scholarships: These scholarships are awarded to students who excel in school, but not to the degree of an academic scholarship. They take other parts of the student's life into account, such as voluntary activities. Creative scholarships: These scholarships require an addition of some sort and are aimed at students with artistic talent. Arts, music and dance scholarships are among the most prominent examples of creative scholarships. Your tax refund may make you want to splurge this month and dip into the funds stored in your checking account. But a lack of three-day weekends and shopping holidays in March means you don't get much bang for your buck. Don't be fooled by discounts and offers that can drive you to spend more money than you should. This is the perfect time of year to do spring cleaning and get your financial house in order at the same time. Here's a of the items you should hold off on buying in March.The temptation to overspend may be high this month as your favorite retailers fill their store windows – and your email inbox – with new styles this spring. But prices for swimwear, sandals and Easter Sunday outfits reach their peak in March. This means that you probably won't see any sales on these items until later in the season. Memorial Day is usually the best time to score deep discounts, free shipping and buy one, get an offer. Throughout the summer, expect to find clothes for sale around big holidays after Memorial Day, like the Fourth of July and Labor Day weekends. Home improvementFor the best deals on lawn care materials and items for home improvement projects, you're better off waiting until stores unveil their Spring Black Friday offerings. According to discount aggregators and ad scanning sites like bfads.net and theblackfriday.com, early April is the best time to fix up your garden after a long winter. For the past few years, retailers like Lowe's and Home Depot have kept blowout Spring Black Friday sales that have been running for more than a week, usually around late March and early to mid-April. Last year, a Lowe's ad showed sales ranging from buying one, getting a 50 percent off exterior paint and stains to $100-off riding lawnmowers. Home Depot offered daily doorbusters, $200 garden furniture sets and more. Keep an eye out for weekly ads and save email alerts so you know what to expect from Spring Black Friday sales this year. Tech fans will likely remain in limbo this month as they wait for the latest and greatest new models to be unveiled. Last month, Samsung unveiled its new hybrid smartphone and tablet, the Galaxy Fold, with a starting price of nearly $2,000. But it doesn't hit stores until January 26. Apple is also expected to launch upgrades on popular products like AirPods and Macs in the coming months, but no official announcement has been made yet. After Black Friday and the Super Bowl, you probably won't find many televisions on sale in March either. Manufacturers usually release new models in March and throughout the month of April, though, so you can find some discounts on last year's inventory. You probably won't see a big tech sale until back-to-school shopping season begins. But if you're trying to save money throughout the year, look for discounts on older models from manufacturers or your favorite authorized dealers. Home appliancesIt doesn't hurt to get a head start on your spring cleaning. Just don't rush to upgrade your big-ticket home items. Beds and mattresses were marked down for Presidents Day last month and ovens, dishwashers, washing machines and dryers probably won't go on sale again until Memorial Day (and later on during Labor Day weekend). Of course, if your fridge gives out this month, you may not have the option to wait several months for a one Discount. Look for deals from online retailers like Amazon and Overstock.com.CarsMindt you find yourself in an emergency, steer clear of the dealership agreement this month. You'll find the steepest discounts on this year's cars in the fall and towards the end of the year, when the 2020 models appear on dealers' lots. But you can score a better deal just by waiting a few weeks. Just as other retailers are looking to lure in shoppers over the long weekend, car dealers run their sales annually around holiday weekends. Wait until Memorial Day for the next holiday sale. Last year, Cars.com reported savings of up to $4,750 on Ford Fusions and up to $5,000 on Jeep Grand Cherokees throughout May. If you don't have much time to wait, try to time your purchase carefully. Save your shopping trip at the end of the month or end of the quarter when you will have more success negotiating with sellers. Study at a Beautiful College Campus in Europe Studying in Europe may have a romantic feel for American students, since ... You probably know the story: student loan debt is at an all-time high and tuition has gone up at many colleges. What you may not know is that there are many thousands of scholarships that have reasonable selection criteria. Of course, there are also niche scholarships for certain demographics of aspiring college students. What we've done is filter through hundreds of college scholarships, scholarships and grants at various student levels and demographic niches, and made a list of fifty of the best awards in terms of their main premium value. This is an update to last year's top scholarships list, and inactive/defunct scholarships have been replaced. We hope that this top scholarships guide will help you and that you will research those who suit you and apply for them.
