The transition guide includes: New features of the third edition of FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS about the 3rd Edition Lessons-by-Lesson Plan integrated Chinese attachments (with samples) One of the great nights of Chinese study was when I went to youtube.com to see their selection of videos delving into the Chinese language. I came across music videos, and after coming very close to completing the integrated Chinese Level One, part one I could understand a few songs. Here's my favorite, which gave me a real boost of confidence: You can sing along with it after listening to it once or twice. In traditional scriptures there are subtitles. There are many other songs you will find too! Have fun!!! Yongan Wu at the University of North Florida has developed a set of vocabulary study tools correlated with integrated Chinese. To try this program, download the attachment. After downloading the attachment: To install, please click on ChineseVocab.jar if you are using a Mac. If you are using Windows, click Chinese vocab - Windows.exe. This is a work in the ass and the creator is actively looking for beta testers to try these tools and provide feedback for improvement! Please send your feedback and suggestions for yongan.wu@unf.edu. Enjoy!
