Taylor/Bovis[3]TenantsSyracuse Mets (IL) 1997-presentSyracuse Salty Dogs (USL-1) 2003-2004 NBT Bank Stadium is a publicly owned, 11,071-seat, minor league baseball stadium in Syracuse, New York. It's the home stadium for the Syracuse Mets Triple-A baseball team in the International League. The stadium, owned and sometimes operated by Onondaga County, opened on April 10, 1997, replacing the aging MacArthur Stadium that had served as the home of Syracuse professional baseball teams since 1934 and which was demolished in 1997. Mets baseball Main article: Syracuse Mets Stadium is home to the Syracuse Mets, Triple-A affiliate of the New York Mets. The field's outfield dimensions are 330 feet (100 m) to left field, 400 feet (120 m) to center field, and 330 feet (100 m) to right field. The stadium has an official capacity of 11,071 people. [5] In addition to regular seating, the stadium also offers luxury suites and a banquet room. The luxurious suites are available in three different sized configurations and all include indoor and outdoor seating as well as optional stadium-provided catering. [7] The stadium's banquet hall is named after former baseball player Hank Sauer, who was with the then Syracuse Chiefs in the 1940s before going on to excel in major leagues in the late 1950s and eventually getting his number retired by the team. The room is close to the right field foul pole and is available for rent year round. [8] Seating is divided into the following: 280 in the 20 luxury suites, 3,000 in 300 (top) level and 7,791 in the lower level. [9] [failed control] From its opening through the 2007 season, the stadium playing surface was AstroTurf, primarily due to the team's then association with the Toronto Blue Jays, who used the artificial surface in their But after the 2007 season, the Astro Turf was removed and replaced with natural grass. [10] A record for baseball attendance was set May 7, 2010, when 14,098 people came to the park for Stephen Strasburg's Triple-A debut. On March 30, 2012, the Syracuse Chiefs announced that a new video board would be installed when the Chiefs took on Durham Bulls on July 7. The screen measures 30 ' X 55' (LED HD display), making it one of the largest video boards in the minor leagues. [12] The stadium's PA system was also upgraded. On July 1, 2019, a $25 million renovation was approved by Onondaga County lawmakers. A 25-year lease with the Mets was also approved. [13] Others use Football The former Football Club Syracuse Salty Dogs of the United Soccer Leagues' A-League also called the stadium home for two seasons. Although they were very popular with fans and had very high attendances, their relationships with the Chiefs and Onondaga County were not positive and the team ceased operations after their second season. Concerts In 2009, the stadium hosted the first two national concerts held at the stadium since 2000, when the Allman Brothers Band played there. On July 1, 2009, the stadium hosted 7,124 fans who came to see Bob Dylan, Willie Nelson and John Mellencamp perform. [15] [16] Two weeks after the Bob Dylan concert, on August 4, the Dave Matthews Band was scheduled to perform at the stadium. [17] Stadium management said they used experience during the smaller-scale Dylan show to make the much larger Dave Matthews Band show as smooth as possible. [15] The show drew over 18,000 fans and was considered a great success, possibly paving the way for more concerts at the stadium in the coming years. [18] Hockey After the success of the 2008 and 2009 NHL Winter Classic outdoor hockey games, Syracuse Crunch owner Howard Dolgan began to express his interest in holding a similar event in Syracuse. Alliance Bank stadium was the logical place to hold such an event as it is the only outdoor professional sports ground in the area. The Crunch estimated the cost of such an event to be between $850,000 and $1.05 million. [19] When that was the case, Dolgan decided to ask the Onondaga County legislature for financial help to put on the event. Dolgan argued that since the event was expected to bring many out of town hockey fans to Syracuse, the county could spend $350,000 of the money set aside specifically to promote tourism and attract out-of-town dollars to Syracuse. [20] The money in this fund is charged as a tax on hotel rooms in the county and could be replenished by the people who come in from out of town for hockey games. But the Legislature voted 16-2 to not provide the $350,000 in funding and instead approved a combined $75,000 in funding. Ahead of the legislative vote, Dolgan publicly declared that without $350,000, would not continue. [20] After the vote, Dolgan immediately rejected the money, saying: We don't make an outdoor game. I'll tell ya, besides disappointing fans and, of course, our organization, I can tell you about 10-12 prominent companies in Syracuse that won't be happy because the idiots who voted the way they did. And I don't mind saying that word. What are they going to do? Get angry with me and vote against something else I want to do? [20] Eventually, the game was held at the New York State Fairgrounds on Saturday, February 20, 2010, as the Mirabito Outdoor Classic. [recion needed] But with new ownership of the stadium, Dolgon would consider holding an outdoor game at NBT Bank Stadium. [21] Scranton/Wilkes-Barre During the 2009 International League Season, Scranton/Wilkes-Barre RailRiders (then known as the Scranton/Wilkes-Barre Yankees) were forced to postpone 11 games due to drainage problems at their home court, PNC Field. [22] [23] In an attempt to give gardeners ample time to repair the field, Scranton/Wilkes-Barre decided to move four of their home games. Two of those games, both against the Buffalo Bisons, were moved to Syracuse. [24] Economics Construction Construction at the stadium was completed in 1997, at a total cost of approximately $28 million. [25] Funding According to The Post-Standard newspaper, funding for stadium construction included: $16 million from New York state taxpayers $6.6 million from Onondaga County taxpayers $4 million from Syracuse Chiefs/Community Baseball Club in Central New York, Inc. $1 million from the Toronto Blue Jays (which was then the Chiefs' affiliated team)[25] Lease In 2012, The Community Baseball Club of Central New York (Syracuse Chiefs) signed an 11-year lease of the stadium with Onondaga County, starting at $126,000 a year and rising two percent a year through 2022, when it would pay $153,576. The Chiefs and County share maintenance, utility and other costs, with the former contributing about $500,000 a year to stadium maintenance. [25] [26] In its previous, 15-year lease, Baseball Club paid no rent, but its contribution of $4 million to the construction of the stadium was written off during the lease, instead of rent, equivalent to about $22,222 per month ($266,664 per year). [25] The Community Baseball Club had an opportunity to purchase the stadium from Onondaga County at the end of 2013, at a cost of $3.05 million. [26] [27] Naming rights NBT Bank pays Onondaga County $140,000 a year for stadium naming rights. The 20-year deal continues until 2025. [28] Jack Webb, executive vice president of NBT Bank and former chairman of Alliance Bank, sits on the board of the Community Baseball Club of Central New York, Inc., owners of Syracuse Chiefs and current operator of NBT Stadium. [29] Previously, the stadium was known as P&C P&C comes from P&C Foods, the regional brand of supermarkets operated by the then Syracuse-based Penn Traffic Corporation (1997-2005); alliance bank stadium (2005-2013). In 2013, Alliance Bank merged with NBT Bank, which agreed to continue the naming rights agreement. [28] Video screen The stadium's digital HD video screen, installed in 2012, was purchased by the Chiefs with a $950,000 bank loan, with Community Baseball Club investments as collateral; and with a county contribution of $200,000. The loan should have been due January 31, 2014. [25] [30] [must be updated] Renovation In August 2018, the New York Mets and Onondaga County discussed a renovation that could reduce capacity by a third while adding a wider range of facilities with an eye toward expanding the team's commitment to NBT Bank Stadium beyond the 2025 season. [31] [32] At the same time, some local officials raised the possibility of building a new downtown ballpark. [33] Onondaga County lawmakers approved July 33, 2019. A 25-year lease with the Mets was also approved. [35] A sign to the left of the main entrance to the stadium that the renovation would begin in autumn 2019. The first phase of the renovation will be ready for the 2020 season. This phase includes new seating and also includes exterior painting to match the Mets' color scheme of orange and blue.. This new seating includes molded armrests and cup holders. Some seats will be angled to improve the view. However, there will be around 2,000 fewer seats than in the past, including that some of the seats will be replaced by café-style seating. In addition, all eight light towers will have new LED lighting. Gallery Syracuse Chiefs play on the field during a game in 2009. Fireworks, NBT Bank Stadium in 2016.
