Systematic positioning controls for pictures Simple, simple hot-shoe flash units of mountain for simplified flash photography and the wide possibility of Nikon's photography system to further enhance the ability of the FT2 Nikkormat FTn but it has an additional touch of accessory shoes that allow use for the installation of live flash shoes other than a 3 mm (PC) single lightning touch dumped on the left side of the body. (FTn, however, has a 3 mm double flash socket (M or X synchronized), there are no hot shoes and a movie speed setting key). Another important difference is that the FT2 meter circuit is powered by a more environmental silver-oxide mercury cell rather than a 1.3-volt mercury cell FTn. The camera body is made of aluminum alloys of dead actors and finished in chrome dying or either in a rare black. It contrasts with the FT3 1977 because the FT2 is still a non-AI body Nikon SLR but has better semi-automatic indexing from the beginning of the FT 1965 and FTn 1967 (The FT3 is different from the FT2 and FT3 have a multi-metal Copal Square S focus aircraft carrier with blossor speeds from 1 to 1/1000 sec. The built-in self-timer operates at about 8 sec. At speeds of 1/125 sec. and below they are X-synchronized, at their higher speed M-synchronized. The body of the camera is made of aluminum alloys the actress dies and finishes either in chrome or black finish and therefore gives it a distinctive solid feel. Since all the bodies of the Nikkormat are built to add professional bodies F2. It has an eyelevel prism seeker that cannot be folded with built-in, through a weighted exposure meter of the lens center that provides 92% of the picture field. The standard K screen has a matte-fresnel field and a separation of central separation of the lens can be seen in the viewfind. There are two ways to check the meter reading, inside the pole or outdoor convenient on a plate. As any other mechanical Nikkormat, the field depth preview button also rests on the upper plate and control of the same mirror lock. The fastening speed is set by the round ring of the lens mountain, and the ASA speed by the index is below the lens. The index is locked unless a catch on the shyness setting lever is pulled. Meters are turned on with film transport levers; it provides centrally weighted meter measurements through lenses on full aperture or shooting. Placed on the camera base plate, power silver oxide battery which has moderate sensitivity between EV3 to EV I7 (Equivalent to f1.4 at 1/4 to f11 at 1/1000 sec.). The speed of ASA/Film is between 6 to 1600. The FT2 Enjoy accepts most of nikon F and F2 accessories unless it has achievers, screens, motor drives (It cannot be used with Nikon AW-1 Winder) and the back of the film.
