Yen previously played Chen Zhen in Fist of Rage, a 1995 television series adapted from the 1972 film of the same name, starring Bruce Lee as Chen Zhen in February 2007. The film was directed by Andrew Lau, who also co-produced the film and served as a filmmaker alongside his partner Ng Man-ching, and gordon Chan co-produced the film; John Chong served as executive producer. The film was co-produced by Hong Kong film distributor Media Asia Films, the production company of Lau Basic Pictures and Chinese film maker Enlight Pictures. He also said that in the fist of legend Chen Zhen was in his 20s, while in the film Chen would be in his 30s. On October 29, 2009, Anthony Wong was announced as part of a supporting actor before it was announced to cast members supporting the film. Zhou Yang and Shu Qi will play two women in the competition for the love of Chen Zheng. Huang Bo will play an underprivileged fighter. Anthony Wong plays a local crime boss. The main filming for The Fist Legend: Chen Zhen's Return began on November 15, 2009, after a press conference attended by the cast and crew. The shooting took place in Shanghai and concluded in early February. For the film, Yen said he included nunchaku and screaming elements as a tribute to Bruce Lee, who played Chen Zhen in the 1972 film Fist of Anger. He also incorporated a number of mixed martial arts (MMA) elements into the film alongside the use of Wing Chun. [9] MMA is an interdisciplinary form of combat against brazilian-based elements Of Jiu-Jitsu, judo, karate, boxing, kickboxing and wrestling, which is evident in the film. Yen also states that the concept behind Bruce Lee's Jeet Kune Do is similar to mma's, so the incorporation of martial arts is essential in the film. Fist Legend: Chen Zhen's return was released in a drama in Hong Kong on September 23, 2010. The box office film made £65million and first made it to the box office during the first week of the drama run in China. Even so, its total rose to just 136 million yen a month later, Donnie Yen was not satisfied with the film's distributors because many of the scenes were removed (about 10 minutes of noncombat scenes), and he commented on Sina Weibo that his overall gross profit of the film would not exceed 200 yen. According to negative reviews, Total Film gave the film two stars out of five, stating that the film came alive when the dance moves at the flame of a glimpse were not so far away longeurs during the snap fragments were slanted and chinese nationalism was boring. The Guardian gave the film two stars out of five, finding the plot confusing. The Hollywood Reporter gave the film a mixed review, referring to the film Popcorn Movie of epic proportions, and one more expected from producer Gordon Chan and director Andrew Lau. The film received a rating of 48% of the 33 reviews. Other commentators commented that the film was not about Chen Zhen, but a Hollywood-style superhero movie. A combination of 007, Spider-Man and Batman Director Andrew Lau responds that Hollywood-style superhero movies are what people want to see, and he thinks the 6:4 ratio of Hollywood style to the original style is perfect for the film.
