Personalize Monsters, Inc.Monsters University Do you hear that? These are the winds of change... – Randall to Sulley and Mike Randall Randy Boggs is a monster who was a member of the Roar Omega Roar fraternity at Monsters University and worked as a scar for Monsters, Inc.. He appeared in Monsters, Inc. and his prequel, Monsters University. It was spoken by Steve Buscemi. Monsters, Inc. Randall is Sulley and Mike's arch-nemesis. Randall's panic aide is Fungus, which usually annoys him. He usually got into a little disagreement with Mr. Waternoose, who serves as Randall's partner in crime. Randall resembles a lizard, with the ability to change color from purple and blue to blend into its surroundings at will, much like a chameleon, making it invisible. Works as Scarer for Monsters, Inc. entering children's rooms through the closet door system and scaring sleeping children into bottle their screams, which is a source of power in their world. He's in competition with Sulley and Mike for the famous spot of Top Scarer. Randall constructed Scream Extractor and took a human child in collaboration with company leader Henry J. Waternoose, with the hope that he would eventually rise to head the company. However, the initial plot failed because Mike sent Sulley back after hours to file papers that Mike forgot to hand over early. Sulley ran into a kid he nicknamed Boo. Sulley and Mike take the child home with them, but since children are banned from their world because of the belief that they can infect monsters, Sulley and Mike are banished when their secret is revealed. Randall and Waternoose are now able to go through with scream extractor on Boo (although Waternoose expresses displeasure that Randall's negligence is the exile of Sulley and Mike, pointing out that Sulley was twice as scary as Randall could ever be). After Sulley manages to escape and destroy scream extractor, Mr. Waternoose tells Randall to stop Sulley, and then Randall attacks and strangles him. He shows himself to be a true adversary because of his hidden abilities; it also tells Sulley that he personally waited so long to attack him. All this time Mike has been trying to apologize to Sulley, thinking Sulley is just fooling around trying to fend off his invisible enemy. Mike is finally annoyed by the fact that Sulley doesn't listen to him and throws a snowball at Sulley, but instead hits Randall, exposing him to two partners, for waiting for them to realize randall was attacking Sulley. Randall is defeated after a chase through the factory, where he and Boo run to the door and Boo starts pulling the antennae and hitting him with a baseball bat, making him turn into different colors. Sulley then restrains him by choking, followed by a snake wrestling maneuver, and throws him through a door that flows him into a trailer in the middle of a swamp to the south, where a hilly family senselessly beats Randall with a shovel, shooting he's an alligator. Sulley broke the door light and then scaled the fence he was leaning on and smashed to the floor far below, trapping Randall. Sulley congratulates Boo for beating him up and then blowing the raspberry in his direction. After that, Sulley and Mike lay out Mr. Waternoose's plan from Randall to the CDA, which will see Waternoose arrested and thwart their plan once and for all. Mike recounted the events of the film in his play Put That Thing Back Where It Came From or So Help Me, exposing Randall's plot to the public; Audiences watching the show were seen whisting against this depiction of Randall, suggesting his reputation was permanently tarnished by his crimes. The fungus is noticeably much happier after Randall's absence and still works as a valued employee at Monsters Inc. Monsters University Monsters University freshman Randy Boggs has high aspirations for college life. A distinctive lizard-like monster with his string of gangly arms and legs plans a major in Scaring and lead an active social life filled with fun, friends and fraternity parties. If he could just get his shameful habit of disappearing under control, he'd do well to leave, because how will he ever be a big Scarer if no one can see him? Randall appears in the prequel and is nicknamed Randy in this film. Before he's insiduished, mean and impatient, he's nerdy, shy and nervous. Randy was first seen when Mike arrived in his new room. The two say goodbye, but Randy, amazed by the objects that fall in. Disappears. Mike suggests he should use that power more often, much to Randy's shock. He soon follows Mike's advice to get rid of the glasses because they do not disappear whenever he becomes invisible, thus giving him his characteristic squinting. Randy's worried about school and wonders if he'll be able to impress the cool kids, but Mike assures him. Follow Mike and sit next to him on the first day of class. Later, as Mike learns to scare, Randy decides to bake cookies for a party hosted by cool kids. At the party, Randy tries to offer cookies to some girls, but Mike bumps into him as he rides Archie the Scare Pig, splashing four cakes on Randy who wrote LAME on his face, to his astonishment. He was later seen helping Mike study by asking him questions about phobias (such as arachnophobia, fear of spiders). However, Randy becomes a member of Roar Omega Roar and eventually leaves Mike, refusing to join Oozma Kappa and help him since Randy is finally with the cool kids. He actively participates in OK's humiliation at the ROR house as one that activates the trap that douses them with toys. During the last part of the Scare Games, Sulley accidentally destroys Randy's attempt to scare off the baby doll, as his roar is so strong that it forces him to fall on the carpet and change into a demeaning pattern of pink with red hearts (similar to a pair of cartoon boxers). As a result, his fear is weak and ineffective, giving him a poor showing (7.5 points out of 20), with the OCEs tied with Roar Omega Roar as a result. Randy vows to get back at Sulley while he's criticized by the fraternity and will probably kick him out after that. During the credits, Randall appears on one of the scare cards, eventually becoming Scarer in Monsters, Inc. Monsters, Inc.: Laugh Factory In the Laugh Factory comic book miniseries by Boom! Studios that take place after Monsters, Inc., Randall manages to sneak back into the factory and tries to frame Mike for stealing props and material from other Monster comics (this could be explained by Randall finding a deal to sneak back through the door, much like Sulley and Mike were able to return to the monster world after being banished to the Himalayas). In the fourth issue, he is assisted by the human boy Sid Phillips (chief antagonist of Toy Story), and they, along with Mr. Waternoose, aim to extract revenge on Sulley and Mike to bring the villains to power. Monsters, Inc. video games Monsters, Inc. Scream Team Randall appears in Monsters, Inc. Scream Team as the recurring head of the game. He appears during pursuit races and must be defeated by achieving the goal before him as he collects a number of Monster Tokens. Randall will always take shortcuts over trampolines, Speedboost Arrows or Flingshots whenever possible, which the player can also take, but on risk of not gathering enough Tokens. In the last race, Arctic Pursuit, Randall cheats starting during the countdown. Disney Infinity Randall also appears as a character who can be played at Disney Infinity with his Monsters University design. Kingdom Hearts III Randall also appears in Kingdom Hearts III as monstropolis level boss. After escaping the trailer by a hair at the end of Monsters, Inc., Randall met Vanitas, who repaired his door and lent his unsuitable soldiers to give him in search of revenge. Insisting that laughter is unsustainable, Randall decides to muster much more negative emotions. Personality In Monsters University, Randall was originally a kind, timid teenage monster who would hang out with Mike. However, after Mike was forced to befriend Sulley and stopped hanging out with Randall, he felt pain and it made him slowly turn on Mike and become his new enemy, even though he betrayed Mike at all. In Monsters, Inc., Randall is greedy, ruthless, insipid, short-minded, competitive and an overall evil in nature. Judging by his intentions to catch children because of their screams (and he may never return them), he is probably willing to seriously harm children (or worse). Trivia Randall's original names were Switt and Ned. He was named Ned in early treatment and Switt in the original opening. In another deleted scene, another name for Randall was Switch. In an early screenplay for a movie instead of Fungus, Mike Wazowski was supposed to be Randall's sidekick. The coat of arms on Randall's head resembles the rear structure of Longisquame, an extinct triassucher lizard. Randall's nephew, Rex (named after a character in Toy Story), appeared in Monsters Inc. Storybook Collection as one of the small children in the company's day care program. It is not known whether Rex has the surname Boggs or not, but he is often referred to as Randall's nephew. Rex is largely reminiscent of his uncle - including Randall's ability to disappear - but he has orange scales and only one foam, unlike Randall's purple shell and three fronds. At Scream Arena, a Nintendo GameCube set up after Monsters, Inc., Randall now appears to be back at work, and is no longer portrayed as mean. Instead, he has clearly reformed, but remains extremely insuttering. In the prequel, Monsters University, Randall doesn't seem to be wearing glasses, while in the original he's not wearing. This is due to the fact that Randall learns that he can't make clothes invisible, such as glasses, and discards them. It also explains why he squinted in Monsters, Inc. because he can't see well without his glasses. One of the backgrounds Fungus used to demonstrate Randall's blur abilities was the cloud background that served as the backdrop to Andy's bedroom in the first Davis residence seen in the first Toy Story movie. At some point, threatens to put fungus through the shredder. This is a shout-out for one of Steve Buscemi's characters, who was once killed by a shredder. At Monsters Inc., Randall invokes his defeat at the Scare Games when he attacks Sulley and says, You have no idea how long I wanted to do this, Sullivan! The color schemes Randall went through after being hit by Boo before Sulley grabbed him and threw him in the hilly trailer door include pale yellow with red zigzag lines, blue with purple spots (Sulley's own color scheme), pink and yellow plaid, white with red stars, a shade of dark turquoise, a red brick pattern, green and yellow spots, red and black plaid. , blue with white spots, purple with a brown head, purple with white stripes, red pattern circle and finally solid green. When his skin gets a heart sample in the Scare Games final, one of his hearts is where his nose would be if he had one. According to the M.U. website, Randall had very little control over his camouflage abilities as a child. Although the MU film doesn't go into detail about that fact, it can be assumed that between the events of M.U. and M.I., Randall learned to take almost perfect control of his abilities. Randall serves as host of Pinball Panic, which came as a bonus disc with selected copies of Monsters, Inc. Collector's Edition DVD 2-disc. Above Randall's bed at Monsters University is a framed inspirational poster with the words Winds of Change written on it: Do you hear them?. This is a reference to his infamous quote from the first film. Randall Gallery as it appears in Monsters UniversityRandall along with its fraternityRandy Boggs holding a cupcakesRandall telling the school anthem Do You Hear It? These are the winds of change.
