Presenting psychology licht pdf

Deborah Licht is a professor of psychology at Pikes Peak Community College in Colorado Springs, Colorado. She has over two decades of teaching and research experience in a variety of environments, ranging from a small private university in the Midwest to a large public university in Copenhagen, Denmark. She has taught initial psychology, psychology in the workplace, abnormal psychology, child development and elementary statistics. She has experience in traditional, online and hybrid courses, and is especially inspired by first-generation students who turn to community colleges to pursue their education. She received a BS in psychology from Wright State University, Dayton, Ohio; an MS in clinical psychology from the University of Dayton; and a doctorate in psychology (experimental psychopathology) from Harvard University. She continues to be interested in research into causation and their influence on behavior, especially in relation to how students think about their successes and failures when pursuing their degrees. Misty Hull is a professor of psychology at Pikes Peak Community College in Colorado Springs, Colorado. She has taught a number of psychology courses at Pikes Peak Community College, including initial psychology, human sexuality and social psychology in a variety of delivery formats (traditional, online and hybrid). Her love of teaching comes through in her dedication to guiding new and part-time faculty in the teaching of psychology. She received her BS in human development and family studies from Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas, and an MA in professional counseling at Colorado Christian University in Lakewood, Colorado. She has served in a number of administrative roles at Pikes Peak Community College, including interim associate professor, and coordinator of the Student Crisis Counseling Office. In addition, she helped facilitate the state system's approach to teaching psychology, as state psychology director for the Colorado Community College System from 2002 to 2010. One of her many academic interests is research on the impact of student endurance in higher education. Coco Ballantyne is a New York-based journalist and science writer with a special interest in psychology. Before teaming up with Misty Hull and Deborah Licht to write Scientific American: Psychology and Scientific American: Presenting Psychology, Coco worked as a reporter for Scientific American online, covering the health, medicine and neurosciences. She has also written for Discover magazine and Nature Medicine. Coco received an MS from Columbia University School of Journalism, where she received an Horgan Prize for Excellence in Critical Science Writing. Prior to her journalistic career, Coco worked as a teacher and teacher, helping high school and students prepare standardised tests such as SAT, GRE and MCAT. She also worked as a physics and math teacher at Eastside College Preparatory School in East Palo Alto, California, and as a human biology associate at Stanford University, where she received a BA in human biology. In this groundbreaking student resource, two committed, technologically savvy professors, Deborah Licht and Misty Hull, combine years of research and teaching insights with the journalistic skill of science writer Coco Ballantyne, who came to the project directly from Scientific American. Together they have created an initial psychology textbook and online learning and understanding system that draws on written profiles and video interviews of 26 real people to help students better understand, remember, search, and relate to psychology basic concepts and ideas. Beautifully crafted, the printed text is filled with examples and features of high interest, including full-page infographics that help students understand and retain important concepts. Online, multiple author-created resources, including scaffolding activities and adaptive quizzes, provide a seamless student learning experience, and a reliable assessment mechanism for teachers and programs. This innovative collaboration between Worth Publishers and Scientific American reflects a commitment to engage and educate all students, including those who sometimes find it difficult to engage - in the modern style of the world's most respected science magazine. Along with student engagement with personal stories, Presenting Psychology 2e also aims to: Demonstrate that psychology is a science Help students see big picture Give high quality available graphics that make a difference!
