Effective Date: 10-29-2003 .A Declaration for Mental Health Treatment, documents also known as a psychiatric progress directive, are a person's preferences for future mental health treatment, and allow the appointment of a health proxy to interpret these preferences during a crisis. The information for this section is from the Legal Rights Service (LRS) publication. This publication tells you what they are, what they look like, how to do it, how to use it, how to change them and cancel them. Advanced directives are documents that express your instructions today about your health services for the future, in case you can't speak for yourself when you need treatment. You can specify your instructions on where and where to get the treatment, who you want and do not want, who can and cannot provide you with treatment. Ohio law allows you to use instructions on health in different types of government documents. There are significant differences between these documents. Power of attorney for health can state instructions on durable medical treatment or mental health treatment or both. The declaration for mental health treatment can state the instructions for mental health treatment. It can be both of these documents stating instructions on mental health treatment, but the declaration for mental health treatment checks. The most important difference between these two documents is the permanent power of attorney for health you can change or cancel your instructions at any time. The declaration for mental health treatment is not always reversible: if you are able to make your own decisions due to a mental illness, it will depend on the treatment instructions given when you create the document.
