Both schools are located in Ottawa County; Ottawa is older than the two and is located in the downtown Sandy Hill neighborhood of the city, while Carlton sits between Old Ottawa South and Dow Lake. Both teams compete in the Eastern Athletics Division of the University of Ontario at U-Sport, frequently finishing near the top of the league table. On January 23, 2007, the two men's basketball teams at Scotiabank Plus faced off in front of nearly 9,720 spectators, a record crowd for a regular-season basketball game at U-Sports (after that) as Canadian Interuniversity Sport). Ottawa Gee-Gees won the opening event 64-62. The event, now known as the Capital Hoops Classic, has expanded to include women's teams as well, with classics featuring biceps of both teams. The January 28, 2009 version broke the 2007 record with 10,523 fans in the two games, with both Carlton teams winning over Ottawa. [1] In the 2013-14 season, the teams faced each other in both the provincial and national finals, and Ottawa won the OUA championship and Carlton won the national title. The 2015 match set a new record at 10,780 and became the first in the series when the Gee-Gees men's team was in the top tier of CIS, with ravens second. Gay Geiss defeated the Ravens in a previous game; the opening of the Battle of Bytown, which took place at U Hall of Montpetit O. However, while their women won 46-40, Gay Geis's men failed to beat the Ravens in the competition series, falling 79-66. Retrieved 2015-02-11.CS1 maint: archived copy as title (link) Retrieved from OTTAWA – As the Arena at TD Place gears up to be the epicentre of Canadian University basketball for the U SPORTS Men's and Women's Final 8 in March, the country's top basketball competition will take over TD Place for the annual Huops Capital Classic on Friday, February 7, 2020. With the participation of the University of Ottawa, Carlton University, and the Ottawa Department of Sports and Entertainment (OSEG), another season of the competition series will be brought to TD Plus this season. We are excited at TD Place to host the biggest games of the U-sport competition on this side of panda, says Mark Gowdy, president and CEO of OSEG, operator of the TD Place Stadium/Arena complex. This will be the first time the Capital Hoops Classic has been held within walking distance of both campuses so it will be a huge crowd and a great fan experience. Making his debut in 2007, Capital Hoops founded its classic as the top university basketball regular-season event nationwide. Last year, the game saw 9,004 fans with a record high in 2015, with 10,780 in doubles. This season's Capital Hoops Classic will feature a quartet of nationally ranked teams with each of the men's and women's teams finding themselves in the U-Sports Top 10 every week of the season so far. On the women's side, Ottawa's Gee-Gees will look to push their winning streak into two games after defeating the Ravens 61-52 last season. Gee-Gees went on to win the U Sports Bronze Medal, its first national medal since 2012, while Carlton retooled after winning the national title the year before. This season, both teams will be fighting for top spot in the OUA East with the Ravens securing a berth in final 8 and Gee-Gees gunning for their acquisitions. On the men's side, the Carlton Ravens have dominated the Capital Hoops Classic until recently, winning three previous wins since Ottawa's last win in 2016. To start 20-2019, both teams are tied at the top of the OUA East stand. The Ravens are making a strong case for defending their national title, while Gee-Gees will once again gain steam as challenger to the throne having already secured his trip to TD Place come March. Capital Hoops I Event to every basketball season, said Sue Hylland, director of sports services at the University of Ottawa. As we gear up for the men's and women's 8 finals, this will be a fantastic opportunity for both campus communities to come together for an amazing night of basketball between four of the best teams in the country. We have a strong basketball community in Ottawa, and both universities have a men's and women's basketball program, says Jennifer Branding, assistant director of recreation and athletics at Carlton University. We look forward to bringing this event to TD Place, which is centrally located between the two campuses. The women's game will be played for a 6 p.m. .m, while the men's game will be played at 8 p.m. .m. Tickets, starting as low as $26, will be on sale to people on Wednesday, November 27 at 10.m. Student tickets will be on sale on each campus from Monday, January 6 for only $15. For full details or to buy tickets, TDPlace.ca.
