On several occasions, we get questions about how to have Amazon Prime Video on Android TV devices because unfortunately, TVs and devices that aren't certified by Amazon don't include the application, nor do they allow it to download them through Google Play. But on Android, everything is possible, and here we'll explain step by step so you can have Amazon Prime Video on your Android TV device as we just need to install a simple APK file and we're ready. Requirements Device with Android TV with available USB portBuyer to download the APKUn pendrive USB Instructions on your computer, let's go to the APKPure website that will allow you to download the updated APK file. Click on the button below to go to the website and download the APK. When you import the site, just press the Download APK button and you're done. Now we need a USB file to computer and copy the APK file you just downloaded. Remember very well where you copy it, although we recommend that you copy it to the home directory, or if the pendrive is empty because much better. Now we will continue to disconnect the pendrive from our computer and connect it to the USB port available on our Android TV device. Then we go to the Google Play Store and search for File Explorer. I recommend that you install the one called X-lore File Manager, at least that one I'll install. If you know a better one, use it at your own risk. Once the application is installed, open it and you'll see a system message asking you for permission to authorize X-lore File Manager to access your files. You just need to allow the option. Now look on the left side of the screen for the pendrive you connected and select it. It will open and this is where the Prime Video APK file should appear, you just need to select it. You'll likely see another security notification that your device does not have permission to install apps from unknown sources. In that notification, select Settings, a bar will open on the right. There, you must enable the button to give authorization to the application so that you can install apps from unknown sources. Now you need to go back to returning to the app again, select your pendrive, and then the APK file from Prime Video. Then the application installation process will begin. The system will ask you if you want to install the application, and you accept the message, of course. (In my case, it turns out I'm going to install an update because I already installed the app). Once the installation process is complete, you'll see that the Prime Video app is already installed in the apps section of your Android TV device. Now you just need to start the app, import your user data, and enjoy the Amazon Prime Video movie and TV catalog. We recommend that you repeat these steps again every two to three months to update the app so that you receive the news and improvements amazon is applying since unfortunately you won't receive updates from the Google Play Store.
