You are taking the next step in your nursing career and need to take the ANCC exam. What exactly are ANCCs all this? What is the American Nurses Certification Center (ANCC)? The American Certification of Nurses (ANCC) is the certification branch of the Nurses' Association (ANA). Its programmes certify and recognise nurses in areas of practical specialisation. The tests are designed to objectively validate entry-level competence in a defined role and clinical practice area based on established standards. The content of the ANCC examinations includes the field of practice, ethics, return and clinical content of each specialized region. ANCC exams are computer-based assessments that consist mainly of multiple-choice questions, although some include drag-and-drop, hot spot, and multi-response questions. Examinations refer to criteria. In other words, the score is based on minimum standards that must be met in order to demonstrate the ability to practice the profession safely and competently rather than being compared with others undergoing the test. Exams range from 150 to 175 scores and 25 pilot subjects not included in the final score. Scores are scaled for a maximum scale score of 500 to 350 to be the minimum success score. The four-hour test time includes check-in, instructions and a computer practice session. ANCC is administered to Premetric Testing Centres and test results will be available before leaving the test centre. For more information about ANCC exams visit ANCC exams. Exam.
