Postal codes and postal codes are numeric codes used to facilitate mail delivery, and area codes are used to specify a geographic region when calling a phone number. Instead of reversing through a large, weighty phone book, you can find and check the postcodes and area codes on the web quite easily. If you have an address or a partial address, you can find your zip code by using the USPS ZIP Code Lookup, which is a tool on the U.S. Postal Services website. You can also search by city or state, or find all cities that are part of a specific zip code. The International Post Codes site, maintained by Columbia University, has a broad index of domestic and international postcodes, in addition to postal acronyms, policies and best practices. You can also use different search engines to find zip codes. For example, using To search for a zip code by address, type what you know about the address to view the map of the location. Card. postal code included. You can even type something like south laurel MD postcode to see them all in this area (and to find links that show a complete list of postcodes in the region). You can also enter a zip code to view the geographic location to which it belongs, as well as a map and other related web results, such as cities that use the postcode. If you add a zip code at the end of your search, Google may display unrelated information. For example, when you search for 90210, you see information about the serial, while 90210 zip code displays zip code information. You can find the postcode with DuckDuckGo, too. Type your zip code, and DuckDuckGo returns the map, zip code location, weather, real estate, and other ZIP code browsing in Bing that is covered by city/localization, maps, and local attractions, such as grocery stores, hotels, and movie theaters. If you type a partial address, bing completes it and reveals the zip code. Similar to a postcode, you can use the search engine to find area code when searching for a city. To do the opposite and figure out what part of the country is associated with the area code, just enter the area code in the search engine. To find the area code with Google, type the name and country of the city you want to search for, then the names area code. You usually find what you need. For international lists, look for a phrase, such as a Kenyan calling code, and you'll get an informative response with the numbers you'll need to call in that country. Enter the city and state in a new Bing search, and you'll see More than likely Google-like results that show the area code at the top of the results. The same applies to international calling codes. Another way to find area code online is with Wolfram Alpha, which bills itself as Computational Intelligence. This data-based search engine doesn't display results like others mentioned on this page, but with a little digging, you can find unique information about cities and clues that you might not find in another search engine. Using Yahoo to find area code is much like using Google; just enter the name of the city and country followed by the area code and you will get an immediate result. Finding international codes is not as easy with Yahoo as it is with Google, but you can certainly use Yahoo to find other websites that can provide you with this information. Quite a few sites specialize in finding area codes that a simple search engine query can not reveal. You can use these free resources to find almost any area code and/or country calling code in the world: Area Codes: Features area codes from mostly the US, although other countries have here as well. BT Phonebook: Use this site to find area codes in the United States country codes: This site asks which country you are calling from from to assign the correct country code, area code, or both. LincMad: A ZIP card that offers visual representation of area codes in the United States and Canada.AllAreaCodes.com: Similar to LincMad, you get a full Map of U.S. and Canadian area codes, as well as links to area code lists, area code information (such as wireless or fixed line, carrier when it was introduced), search tools, and printable area code lists. Thanks for letting us know! Tell us why! George Diebold/Getty Images 578 area code is one of the unallocated codes in the North American numbering plan, which includes the United States, Canada, some Caribbean countries and U.S. territories. Using a phone number with 578 area code is an attempt to hide the source of the call. The area codes nanp were first used in the early 1950s, and 86 of the possible 152 number codes were used. As the number of telephone users increased over the decades, additional area codes were exaggerated to complement needs in the continent's higher density regions. For example, area code 917 doesn't overlap with area codes 212 and 718 in New York, so that it accounts for a significant increase in the number of phone users. Area code 543 is currently not used in North America. The closest existing area codes to this one are 541 for Eugene, Oregon, and 551 in Newark, New Jersey. Area codes are administered and processed by the North American Numbering Plan Association or NANPA. What people usually call area codes is officially known as NPA codes. Any three-digit set (000-999) is theoretically an area code, but only 316 of these codes are used during this time. Additionally, some codes are stored as special markers of some kind. For example, the 800 area code is used for a free call where the recipient pays for the call instead of the caller. Ugurhan Betin/Getty Images area code 668 is not a valid area code in the United States. However, it is a valid area code for Oujda, located in the north-east of Morocco. Calls received from area code 668 can be tracked by telemarketers, invoice collectors and inspectors. The 668 area code is used to hide a valid phone number, making it impossible to accurately call or track a business call. You can report phone calls and text messages from this area code and add them to the list of fake numbers. Scam artists are also known to be using invalid phone numbers. Numbers.
