Genesis 3 is a representation of the world we live in. Seemingly powerless choices, infidelity and pride are our on-going struggle. We're corrupt. According to the same Article shuster, why would God want us to believe, believe, and listen to him, even if there is no reason to do so so that we can wrap our minds around? We can't be all-knows, as God, so it requires us to trust him and put him at the center of our life idols i-dol'-a-three (teraphim, domestic idols, idols: eidololatrea): There is sometimes in the human mind a desire for visible forms to express religious conception, and this tendency does not disappear with acceptance, or even with constant recognition, of pure spiritual rights (see PICTURES). Idolatry originally meant worshipping idols, or worshiping false gods using idols, but came to mean among the Old Testament any worship of false gods, whether by images or otherwise, and finally the worship of Yahweh through visible symbols (Hose 8:5,6; 10:5); and finally in the New Testament idolatry came to mean, not only to give no creation or human creation honor or devotion that belonged to God himself, but to give any human desire priority over God's God (1 Corinthians 10:14; Galata 5:20; Colossi 3:5; 1 Peter 4:3). The adjoining gods of Fennel, Canaan, Moab--Baal, Melkart, Astarte, Chemosh, Moloch, etc. -- were particularly attractive to Jerusalem, while old Semitic calf-worship seriously affected the state religion of the northern kingdom (see GOLDEN CALF). Already in the Assy and Babylonian periods (8th and 7th centuries BC), various deities from the Tigris and the Euphrates interrupted-- the worship of Tammuza, which became a little later the most popular and seductive of all (Ezekiel 8:14)-- while the worship of the sun, moon, stars and zodiac signs became so intensely fascinating that they were introduced well into the temple itself (2 Kings 17:16; 21:3-7; 23:4,12; Jeremiah 7:13 p.m.; 8:13 p.m. Ezekiel 8:16; Amos 5:26). Special allure to idolatry, as offered by these various cults were found in their adoration of natural forces and their appeal to primitive human desires, especially sexual; also through associations formed by intermarry and an appeal to patriotism, when some cruel deity was sought the help of a cruel deity in times of war. The worship of Baal and Astarte, which was particularly attractive, was closely associated with laughter and drunkenness (Amos 2:7,8; compare 1 Kings 14:23), and also very appealed to magic and reassuring (e.g. Isaiah 2:6; 3:2; 8:19). Victims offered the idols fire (Hose 4:13); (Isaiah 57:6; Jeremiah 7:18); were presented the first fruits of the earth and dozens (Hose 2:8); tables of foodstuffs have been laid down before them (Isaiah 65:11); believers kiss idols or throw kisses to them (1 Kings 19:18; Hose 13:2; Job 31:27); reached out their hands in admiration (Isaiah 44:20); knelt or prostrated in front of them and sometimes danced on the altar, gashing with knives (1 Kings 18:26,28; for a fuller summary see EB). Even before the Babylonian exiled Hebrew prophets taught that Yahweh was not only better than all the other gods, but ruled alone as God, another deity is nonentities (Leviticus 19:4; Isaiah 2:8,18,20; 19:1,3; 31:7; 44:9-20). The heavy satire of this period proves that the former fear of living demons, who were supposed to inhabit idols, disappeared. These prophets also taught that the temple, ark, and sacrifices are not necessary for true spiritual worship (e.g. Jeremiah 3:16; Amos 5:21-25). These prophecies produced a strong response against previously popular idol-worship, though later this worship are not rare (Ezekiel 14:1-8; Isaiah 42:17). Maccabean's epoch placed national heroism clearly on the side of one God, Yahweh; and although Greek and Egyptian idols were revered in Gaza and Ascalone and other semi-pagan communities which, since 2 May 1999, were not accepted, they were not in a position to do so.
