(Algonquian is a large number of languages spoken in the eastern United States.) At a time when the novel is set, Penobscots, like other Algonquians, were somewhat nomadic and relied mainly on hunting and fishing for their food. Fur Trade North American fur trade began in 1500, when French explorers began trading American Indians. They blocked manufactured goods such as tools, weapons and textiles for otters, beavers, mink, fox and other fur. Soon European consumers developed an insatiable appetite for North American furs, especially beaver pelts that were made of heavy, fashionable felt hats for men Read aloud chapters sign Beaver Elizabeth George Speare classes 3-5; Genre – Fiction; GRL T; AR PTS: 5.0 Until the day his father returns to his cabin in the Maine desert, 12-year-old Matt must try to survive on his own.
