Rocknes V2.0 Final It's a pinball game released in 2003 for the Gameboy beforehand. There's a catch. It's not only a pinball machine, but you also need to catch all 151 Pokémon. There are two pinball machines in play. One is for Pokémon version, and the other is for Pokémon sapphire version. The goal of the game, as in the most pinball game is to keep the ball alive to score as many points as possible. The other goal revolves around Pokémon Pokémon Gotcha catches them all. Players must catch Pokémon and keep them in Pokedex. Some Pokémons can only be obtained after they have evolved, and this adds a challenge to the game. It is similar to traditional pinball machines. The two boards have the same layout. The main goal of the game after the player launches the ball, is not to lose. There's a couple of flippers that hit the ball up. When players hit a lot of objects around the field, the score increases and players get a new ball. The game has a ball saver; If the ball is lost in the first few rounds, he returns the ball to the bearer. If the player loses all the balls, the game is over. Another goal of the game is to complete the Pokedex. There are four modes - Catch 'em Mode - player hit the silhouette of Pokémon to reveal it and then captures it. Egg Mode- it's similar to catch 'em mode, but the difference is that the baby Pokémon roam around the board and players have to catch it before it returns. Evolution Mode- to develop their Pokémon, in this mode, players must hit the evolution item markers. Travel Mode- in this mode players can leave the current location and goes around to catch more types of Pokémon.
