Fantasy baseball waiver wire pickups week 4

0 out of 11 From one terrible way out, Clay Buchholz was better than you think. Gretchen Ertl/Associated PressA nov. Some of the players mentioned last week - including Steven Souza Jr., Denard Span, Rajai Davis, Stephen Vogt, Anthony DeSclafani, Brandon Morrow and Kevin Plawecki - already own a number of leagues, but they remain high-quality pickups if available. In the interest of the names remaining new, let us avoid a repeat. Here are the top 10 waiver-wire pickups for Week 4.Just Missed1 of 11 While Carlos Beltran was tormented, Chris Young is hot - and worth adding to deeper leagues. Phelan M. Ebenhack/Associated PressYimi Garcia, R.I., Los Angeles Dodgers (19.5 Percent)Yonder Alonso, 1B, San Diego Padres (13.8 Percent) Adeiny Hechavarria, SS, Miami Marlins (23.6 Percent Owned)Juan Lagares, OF, New York Mets (6.1 Percent Owned)David Freese, 3B, Los Angeles Angels (10.4 Percent Owned)Chris Young, OF, New York Yankees (40.5 PercentEd)Ike Davis, 1B, Oakland Athletics (3.0 Percent Owned)Aaron Harang, SP, Philadelphia Phillies (41.3 percent)Michael Saunders, P.R., Toronto Blue Jays (1.4 Percent)Tim Beckham, 2B, Tampa Bay Rays (1.1 Percent)Rubby De La Rosa, SP, Arizona Diamondbacks (1.7 Percent)Justin Maxwell, OF, San Francisco Giants (5.8 percent own) Kick-off: Marco Gonzales, SP/RP, St. Louis Cardinals (0.2 Percent)2 of 11Carlos Osorio/Associated PressWhile it would be nice to have Marco Gonzales ready to jump the St. Louis Cardinals immediately rotation in Wainwright's apparent season-ending Achilles injury Achilles that Gonzales went on the disabled list himself. Gonzales is dealing with a minor chest problem in 2013 and the decision to put him on the shelf for now is a bit precautionary, believes Brian Walton from Scout.com.Na one side, then you won't necessarily want to pick a 23-year-old at the moment. On the other hand, if it comes through OK, it looks like the best bet that Waino's long-term replacement will be in 2015 ahead. Bernie Miklasz of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch writes, a healthy Gonzales is a clear choice. While Gonzales' profile isn't super fantasy-friendly because he's not a big hitman, he has good control and command, and gets that pitch in the NL, so his ERA and WHIP can be worth owning. In addition, the Cardinals pitcher and these guys are always important in fantasy.No. 9: Jimmy Paredes, 3B, Baltimore Orioles (12.0 Percent Owned) 3 of 11Gail Burton/Associated PressMore than possible is what Jimmy Paredes is doing, just passing a hot streak, but boy, it's something hot. Since it was activated from the DL in mid-April, at the same time the second baseman Schoop went for it, the 26-year-old went 15-for-35 (.429) with four doubles, a triple, three home runs and a stolen base in eight games. Paredes also scored nine runs. That can't last - not when the switch-hitter came in 2015 with a career slant line .242/.279/.330 and just five homers in 145 major league games. Right? Then, every year, he brings a handful of barely-questioned players before the breakout, and the Baltimore Orioles have a tendency to get out of the scrapheapers as best they can. Besides, since Paredes' former Astros perspective has found a sudden success elsewhere, there are at least some quick comparisons with J.D. Martinez. We're not there yet, and there are different types of players, but never know.No. 8: Josh Reddick, OF, Oakland Athletics (13.9 Percent)4 of 11Pat Sullivan/Associated PressJosh Reddick has posted two disappointing campaigns in a row after his 32-homer, 85-RBI effort in 2012. Part of the problem, however, was health, with the 28-year-old only taking 223 games in 2013-14. He even opened the DL in 2015. The most interesting? Reddick, who has struggled with strikes throughout his career, has only choked four times in 51 total appearances on the plate. That seems to be the reason the Oakland Athletics did a good job of keeping him away from the Southern sings (only five bats). Don't expect the kind of punch you've kept on the list all year outside the al-only leagues. But while it's going well, Reddick is a useful enough backup outfielder to fill in when one of your starters has a day off or gets hurt.No. 7: Wei-Yin Chen, SP, Baltimore Orioles (7.1 Percent Owned)5 of 11GAIL BURTON/Associated PressIt's just happen to write Wei-Yin Chen after a couple of times 2000. And yet, the Orioles left-hander is actually about as safe as he can be an instantly available starter. The 29-year-old had a 3.54 ERA and a 1.23 ERA last year and has won 16 games. All of this, however, came with a measly 6.6 strikeouts-to-nine rate, which explains the unseaed factor. Well, Chen is back this season, having only limited boston's strong Red Sox line to two runs on four hits in eight strong innings over the weekend, ing his season's ERA and WHIP to 2.78 and 1.06. Heads up: Chen's next start is on Friday against the light-hit Tampa Bay Rays at home, making it a solid starting spot - one you might want to hang for while.No. 6: Mike Leake, SP, Cincinnati Reds (11.3 Percent owned)6 out of 11Jeff PressMike Leake pretty much is a Wei-Yin Chen National League: completely free of flash fantasy and yet completely own as a reliable option you won't regret keeping around and deploying in real matchups. Leake, 27, followed last year's solid season (3.70 ERA, 1.25 WHIP) with a 3.90 ERA and 1.01 WHIP through his first four starts of 2015.Like Chen, Leake is wishing the u category of daesh, or here i here, the right handed Cincinnati Redsahole let u ease at 9 strikeouts, as he did against the Chicago Cubs Friday.Plus, Leake is a free-agent-to-be, he's pitching for a payday, if you buy into that thing. At least on Wednesday, pick him up against the terrible Milwaukee Brewers. Please.No. 5: Jake Marisnick, OF, Houston Astros (20.6 Percent)7 of 11LM Otero/Associated PressNot long ago, Jake Marisnick was the top prospect in the Toronto Blue Jays and then the Miami Marlins systems, so there might be something for his big start this year. He was then replaced twice before he was 24, which is quite rare for a young player unless the teams that employ him see him more as ingested as containment. Marisnick's fantasy value so far is from an average of .364, which has been confirmed by the unsustainable BABIP. Of course, he also has a pair of home runs and six stolen bases, so this is a potentially productive fantasy season if Marisnick can gain something from his plate approach. For now, he should be in the leagues, who are 12 teams or deeper, people in the 10s could go a cautiously optimistic path and add to see what happens.No. 4: Clay Buchholz, SP, Boston Red Sox (46.3 Percent Owned)8 of 11Chris O'Meara/Associated PressAdmittedly, just everyone's first when reaction is about Clay Buchholz is: Do. I'm not going to be in Trust.That's fair, considering the roller-coaster career the Boston Red Sox right-hander has had. Hey, it's fair even considering 2015 he had a date. The 30-year-old has a 4.84 ERA and a 1.43 WHIP in his four starts. Look closer and you'll see the injury was done in a brutally bad outing against the New York Yankees on April 12, in which he surrendered nine earned-run hits in 3.1 innings. Buchholz actually sports a 2.71 FIP, which is quite promising, as well as his 29-to-7 strikeout-to-walk ratio of 22.1 frames. If you have room to add and shing that right approach to be here, as Buchholz has in it, it's SP3 for a fantasy that you don't want to fall into the hands of one of your league-allies. And if he flies into the air on Tuesday in his next outing - against the Toronto Blue Jays - then he's just cut out again.No. 3: A.J. Burnett, SP, Pittsburgh Pirates, Pittsburgh Pirates 9 of 11Ross D. Franklin/Associated PressClearly, the Philadelphia Phillie disagreed with A.J. Burnett. (And really, who could blame him?) After two quality campaigns with the Pittsburgh Pirates in 2012-13, he won 26 games with a 3.41 ERA, 1.23 WHIP and 8.9 K/9 - Burnett was a disaster in desperation for most runs in baseball last season. Returning to Pittsburgh, where he returns to the team with pitcher Ray Searage and relishing the fruits of a strong Pirates defense, the comeback is back. And Burnett owes it. The 38-year-old has a 1.80 ERA and a 1.24 WHIP that goes with 20 whiffs in 25 innings in his first four outings, past three quality starts. Burnett is out next time out, he gets the St. Louis Cardinals on the road Friday, so you might want to stay, as the Cards have hit 25 runs in 25 innings at home against Burnett since the new Busch Stadium opened. But Burnett is again a capable fourth or fifth fantasy starter, thanks to his return to the City.No. 2: Wilmer Flores, SS, New York Mets (8.0 Percent)10 of 11Kathy Willens/Associated PressThings started slowly for Wilmer Flores in his first season as a full-time league starter. The 23-year-old has hit just .182 through his initial 10 games in 2015, and he looked adeuth on defense too, raising some questions about his viability as the New York Mets everyday shortstop. Although defensive concerns will continue to follow Flores, he has shown that he can at least cover the situation, more importantly for fantasy purposes, he has begun to match his offensive potential well. Even with 0-for-3 on Sunday night, Flores has gone 10-for-25 (.400) in his last seven games since that slow start, and has also hit and driven in five runs in some places while he slashed par out of the park. Given how shallow the position is to the shortstop, it's strange that Flores, who is hitting .291 with nine runs, three homers and eight RBI combined, is not in possession of multiple leagues. Of course, it doesn't offer speed. Would pashmi's thinking be enough to put a borderline top-10 player in position? A.S. right.No Dodgers (24.8 Percent)11 from 11 Mark J. Terrill/Associated PressJust's 11th-seeded Los Angeles Dodgers called on the Los Angeles Dodgers to play for Alex Guerrero. That's understandable: the Cuban import hits just .500 with five homers and 13 RBI through 11 games. Alex Guerrero started just four games and logged just 22 at-bats, and yet he has five home runs already for the Dodgers, according to Anthony Castrovince of Sports on Earth. Lots of love and respect for Juan Uribe, but Don Mattingly needs to get this guy more consistently in line at third base. While Guerrero played only as a backup and only at third base, where veteran Uribe (.610 OPS) fought, the 28-year-old could see a few runs in left field. There's a good chance you'll see him out there, the skipper told Dylan Hernandez of Los Angeles Times.To it's interesting because Guerrero could have two paths to PT. Like Uribe, regular left-hander Carl Crawford was a fiacy (.599 OPS). For now, the likelihood of Guerrero gaining a starting job seems small, All the opportunity could be presented to him and he's hit further, the ossucyive-ineffectiveness of Uribea Crawford.At bar short-term, here's the opportunity that Guerrero sees an uptick in action, especially the tub he's so sexy and Yasiel Puig is on the disabled list with a bum hamstring. The club wouldn't mind the offense, we imagine. All ownership stakes are polite to ESPN Fantasy Baseball. Players who owned more than 50 percent of the leagues were not taken into account. The statistics are accurate until Sunday, April 26, and MLB.com, Baseball-Reference.com and FanGraphs, unless otherwise stated. Do you need more fantasy baseball help?
