Getty Images How much can you really tell about a person just from their postcode? According to Esri, a geographical information firm, the answer is: quite a bit. Esri's website includes a mail-seeking tool that allows visitors to find out demographic information for any zip code in the United States. So while you already know the best states to look for a new home, now you can learn even more about each particular neighborhood to find one that's right for you. Here's how it works: Esri's Tapestry segmentation divides the neighborhoods into 67 separate segments based on socioeconomic and demographic composition, in order to provide a snapshot of what life is like in each place. For example, Beverly Hills' famous 90210 postcode's tapestry suggests that 73 percent of residents are classified as top tier (aka they're super rich and have everything they ever wanted), 20 percent are marked trends (aka they're young professionals who care about the finer things in life), and 8 percent are in their retirement years. Esri And though the site isn't brand new, summer moving season seems like the perfect time to take a deeper look at the neighborhoods (or neighbors) you're considering. You might find more information about this and similar content at piano.io Zip Codes and Zip Codes are numeric codes used to facilitate email delivery, and area codes are used to specify a geographic region when dialing a phone number. Rather than spinning through a large, unrelenting phone book, you can find and verify zip codes and area codes quite easily on the web. If you have an address or partial address, you can find the zip code through USPS Zip Code Lookup, a tool on the U.S. Postal Service website. You can also search by the city or state, or find all cities that are part of a particular zip code. The International Postcodes website, maintained by Columbia University, has an extensive index of domestic and international postcodes, in addition to posting acronyms, policies, and best practices. You can also use various search engines to find zip codes. With Google, for example, to do a zip code search by address, type what you know about the address to see a map of the location with the zip code included. You can even type something like South Laurel MD postcode to see everyone for that area (and to find links that show a full list of postcodes for that region). You can also enter a zip code to see the geographic location it belongs to, as well as a map and other related web results, such as cities that use that zip code. If you don't add zip code at the end of the search, Google might show unrelated information. For example search for 90210 reveals information information the TV series, while 90210 postcode shows information about the zip code. You can also find a zip code with DuckDuckGo. Enter a zip code and DuckDuckGo returns a map, the location of the zip code, weather, real estate, and other appropriate web results. A postcode lookup on Bing brings back what city/location it pertains to, maps, and local attractions, such as grocery stores, hotels, and movie theaters. If you type a partial address, Bing completes it for you and reveals the zip code. Much like with a zip code, you can use a search engine to find an area code by searching for the city. To do the reverse and find out which part of the country is related to an area code, just enter the area code in the search engine. To find an area code with Google, type the name of the city and state you are looking for, followed by the words area code. You'll usually find what you need. For international lists, search for a phrase like Kenya's calling code, and you'll receive an informative reply with the numbers you need to make a call in that nation. Type the city and state into a new Bing search and you'll more than likely see Google-like results showing you the area code at the top of the results. The same goes for international phone codes. Another way to find an area code online is with Wolfram Alpha, who bills himself as Computational Intelligence. This data-based search engine doesn't display results like the others mentioned on this page, but with a little digging, you can find unique information about cities and states that you might not find on another search engine. Using Yahoo to find an area code is a lot like using Google; just type in the city and state name, followed by area code, and you'll get an immediate result. Finding international codes isn't as easy with Yahoo as it is with Google, but you can obviously still use Yahoo to find other websites that can give you that information. Quite a few websites specialize in finding area codes that a simple search engine query might not reveal. You can use these free resources to find almost any area code and/or country calling code in the world: Area Codes: Features area codes of mostly the United States, although other countries are also distributed here. BT Phonebook: Use this site to find area codes in the UK country codes: This site asks you which country you are calling for and to assign the correct country code, area code, or both. LincMad: A zip code map that provides a visual representation of area codes in the United States and Canada.AllAreaCodes.com: Similar to LincMad, you get a full area code map of the U.S. and Canada, but links to region-specific area code lists, details about the area codes (e.g., wireless or landline, carrier, when introduced), search tools and printables Thank you for letting us know! Tell us why! Why! Memorized exactly two ZIP codes: 90210 and whatever their own ZIP code is. We can thank a certain TV show in Beverly Hills for that. Aside from that, general knowledge of these five-digit figures is quite limited. We put them at the end of addresses, and then our post is magically delivered to the right place. But through some clever methods of detection (online research), we've discovered one of the most highly liked secrets all mail carriers know: what ZIP codes really are and how they work. (OK, so it's not really a secret, but now you have something to talk about your postman.) Learn how you can help the USPS right now. Why do we use zip codes? The entire practice of using ZIP codes is a relatively new system put in place on July 1, 1963. Before that, which began in 1943, the U.S. Postal Service used only a series of postal zones for major cities. If you were writing an address, that number would go to the city and in front of the state, and mail carriers used it to sort mail more efficiently. See what postal delivery looked like 100 years ago. What does each number in a zip code mean? In 1944, a postal worker named Robert Moon submitted an idea for a new postal zone system that would cover the entire country. The first number will stand for a group of states, starting at zero on the east coast and ending at nine on the west coast, and the second and third numbers will specify what part-center facility (the place where mail is processed and distributed) the post should go into that area. The U.S. Postal Service eventually adopted this plan with the addition of two numbers at the end to indicate the right post office or postal zone, and thus the Zone Improvement Plan Code or ZIP code- was born. Check out these other surprising facts about the U.S. Post Office.What do the four numbers mean at the end of a zip code? About 20 years after the first ZIP codes were put in place, the Postal Service made one more customization to the system: the four digits that come to your ZIP code. It stands for a specific area covering any given post office. The sixth and seventh numbers refer to a delivery sector, which could be a group of streets, one large building or another small geographic area. The last two stand for a delivery segment, such as the floor of an office building or one side of a street. Although the U.S. Postal Service says proper credit for the ZIP code's creation goes to a committee of people, our addresses will look quite different if it weren't for Moon's numerical inspiration. If you didn't know it, you certainly won't know these 23 secrets your email carrier won't tell you. Using a phone number with a 578-area code represents an attempt to disguise the source of a call. Area codes in the NANP were first used in the early 1950s, with 86 of a possible 152 area codes being used. Nail phone user numbers have increased over the decades, additional area codes have been overstretched to complement needs in higher-density regions of the continent. For example, area code 917 overlap area codes 212 and 718 in the New York City area to accommodate the significant increase in phone users there. Ugurhan Betin/Getty Images The area code 668 is not a valid area code in the United States. However, it is a valid area code in Oujda, which is located northeast of Morocco. Calls received from area code 668 can be traced back to telemarketers, account collectors and surveyors. The 668-area code is used to disguise the valid phone number, making it impossible to pinpoint the call or track the business that posts the call. Phone calls and text messages received from this area code can be reported and added to the fake number list. Scam artists are also known to use invalid phone numbers. Numbers.
