Buy ESL Lesson Plans American Slang Lessons When I taught ESL in the U.S., my classes focused on slang, pronunciation and conversation. Slang/Accents I used Slang: A guide to street talk books in my conversation classes that teach common slang words and reduced speech form. I created quizzes for each chapter of the first book. (I also used Focus on pronunciation in the same classes, so some parts of the pronunciation test quiz.) The dictations at the end of the quiz tend to focus on vocabulary and reducing the shape of the lesson from each chapter. Another book that teaches basic slang and idiom is the year in the life of an ESL student. I like to expose my students to as many accents as possible, so I often use Dr. Ladefoged's writing about Arthur the Rat in five English accents. The Accent Speech Archive also has a large collection of sound files of native English speakers. I'll hand out this list of links at the end of the semester, so that students can use the internet at home to learn more about slang words and English accents: Useful links to slang and accents If you find these resources useful, please consider buying language tutorials, ESL lesson package plans, or sending donations to support ielanguages.com. Thank you! These days, children are so active social media and the internet in general that they pick up little bits of English all over the world. Where previous generations could only have a textbook and teachers, children now have so many ways to learn the language. Some methods are popular with my my Include watching Youtube videos 'influencer', listening to English or American music, and even playing live video games with people from all over the world! All this is fantastic interaction and understanding of practice, but there may not be a proper English language that you are trying to teach in your lessons! For me, the slang they pick up isn't that bad. the only way to make your classes, and their education, more interesting. So stay with me, I have a few activities to share with you! In order to give examples, I used a list of common slang words from myenglishteacher, very useful! Check it out here; 55 The most commonly used British and American slang word Word Matching Is one great pleasure for intermediate ability students, they are really stuck and you may find that they already know some words! Choose 20 or so slang words that you like and you think they might prove useful, and write either the proper English equivalent, or the definition next to it. Or both! Unreal! That's amazing!..... An expression of surprise or delight. Bob is your uncle.... All finished / There you have!..... A phrase that means your success is guaranteed. If you have this, cut them and mix them. I would suggest doing this as a couple of activities, so you need to do it for no matter how many couples you have in the class. They must place slang words with appropriate definitions or appropriate English equivalents. When you're done, invite them to do some dialogue with their partner, using the words in the conversation. Spot slang! I love using music in my classes, so it's always me looking forward to the lesson! Choose a song that has some slang in it, preferably not one with too much profanity in it. Find it here; Director's Office - Young MC. Print the lyrics. Again, I would suggest doing this as a steam work-up. Get students to identify different slang expressions and guess their meaning out of context. As an easier variation, emphasize slang expressions in advance and simply force students to develop values. Once they understand the target language, get them to make some suggestions or role-playing games in practice! Word Replacement This game is for students who have a higher level of slang vocabulary! I have two variations of this. It depends on which one you find more fun I think! Get 10 or so slang words and think about their proper English equivalents. Write these English versions in a short paragraph of text on any subject where they all make sense. students to read the paragraph and replace the English versions of slang words! You can also do it the other way around for students who don't have the slang vocabulary to complete it. Variations think it's fun to stick phrases around the room as well! Students can get active by moving around the room with their partner and replacing phrases one by one. The first team to get the right winning list! Were you having fun with them? Do you have more activities to share? Let me know in the comments below! Below!
