By Daniel Westlake A movie soundtrack is one of the most important parts of a movie, but few people know how or where to download them. You can buy songs on iTunes or AmazonMP3. However, there are a number of online sites where you can download this amazing movie soundtrack that you heard in this movie the other day. All you need to do is identify the film, the composer and check out one of these sites. A vast database that goes beyond the opening theme song, the song on the credits or the air of all the characters dance to - it features the less notable numbers of a movie that only real fans will recognize. With over 45,000 tracks to choose from, Soundtrack Collector.com is for the serious and passionate soundtrack musician who is truly a fan of composers and the often brilliant and underrated work they do for each film. With what may be the largest online movie soundtrack database, ArtistDirect.com provides most of these downloads for free (with fees that must be paid for access to others). However, most of the soundtracks that are easiest to find are mainstream pop songs that were purchased for the soundtrack, not necessarily from composers who have made movie music. Keep this in mind if you are looking for something reasonably obscure. Last.fm seems to have most of the music tracks in his database - the challenge comes with finding these tracks, have all the keyword information available to locate them. Some of the titles are listed by film, some are listed by composer and others are simply listed by title. Don't be discouraged if you can't find it in the first place - or just use one of the other sites listed above. This image was lost some time after publication, but you can still see it here.
