Originally published as Parents in September 2015 issue Free school supplies can help ease the burden back to school costs that many families face. With the cost of school supplies rising and the number of supplies required from schools to go up, it's costing more and more to buy school supplies each year. If you have several school-age children then your costs can easily reach hundreds of dollars a year. Whether you're a parent who can't find money in your budget to buy school supplies this year, or you're trying to stretch your budget, check out below to find some ways you can get free school supplies for your kids this year. Your first step to getting free school supplies should be to contact your child's school. Often schools will buy additional supplies each year that they can provide for families who are unable to buy. Sometimes teachers themselves will use part of their budget in the classroom to buy additional supplies for their students. If you are not lucky with your child's individual school, you will want to contact the school district. Many school districts have programs set up where the community can donate school supplies, which they can then hand out to families who need them. If they don't have a program set up, they'll probably have information about city-wide programs that give away free school supplies. Reaching out to the community should be your next step in getting free school supplies. All kinds of organizations set up programs to make school supplies, you just have to figure out who they are in your community. You can contact your local news stations and newspapers. This is who organizations that hand out school contact needs when they want to get a word about their program. If local media are not aware of any programs, they will most likely be able to do footwork to find out where these programs are. Other places that often include free school delivery programs include local universities, churches, and charities such as Volunteers of America and United Way. If you're a military family, Operation Homefront partners with Dollar Tree each year hand out free backpacks and school supplies. You can register with the Back-to-School Brigade to this fantastic program. If you're looking to stretch your back on the school budget, watching free after-discount offers will help you score quite a few free school supplies. Many stores offer free after-discount deals on school supplies and you'll need to follow your Sunday memos to see if there are any offers for the week. Staples has a program called Easy Discounts that makes it really easy to get free school supplies during July and August. Free after-discount items can trade money because so many people forget to send in a rebate. Be sure to submit a discount so you get your money back or your school supplies won't be free after all. Feel free to take advantage of free after-discounts school supplies that are not on your child's school supply list this year. Give it away for next year or better yet, donate. Back to school shopping is big business for shops and they want to take you and spend money. Often the doorman will have to get you in the door. They're hoping you can buy all the school supplies there, but that doesn't mean you have to. OfficeMax/Office Depot and Staples often have school supplies on sale for 1c, 10c, 50c, $1. Sometimes they also have coupons in their ads to help you save even more money. If you're like most parents, you have a drawer or even a closet full of school supplies that you've bought in the past, but that you probably won't need again. Consider hosting a school offer swap where parents in or around your school district bring school supplies they don't need, and trade them for the ones they do. If you can't get free school supplies, you can definitely get them cheap. To do this, you will need to shop in more than one place, watch ads and use coupons. If you go to one place and get all the school supplies you need, you will pay a lot more money than you have to. You'll want to start watching newspaper ads in July and start visiting every store to pick up just really good deals. Pay special attention to Walmart, Kmart, Big Lots, Target, Walgreens, and grocery ads for back to school sales. These stores will have several items that are a particularly good deal every week. If you don't get a newspaper, you can view and subscribe to all of these ads online. Coupons are a great help in saving for school supplies as well. Follow your coupons in sunday newspapers and visit Coupons.com often to see if any coupons pop up for school supplies. Combine them with sales and you'll really save some money. Another way to save on school supplies is to take advantage of tax-free weekends that many states need to help mitigate the cost of school supplies and others back to school appropriations. Now it's time for next year's school supplies. Your child will always have to bring basic necessities such as pencils, crayons and laptops as some of their school supplies Year. When you see a good deal, buy some extras that you can use for next year. In fourth grade, students begin to form the basis for developing research skills, writing skills, and critical reading skills. The supplies listed here are typical of the tools students will use to learn fourth-grade skills.
