Download The Exorcist - The Exorcist Season 1 – HD 720p and 1080p Dual Audio 5.1 Torrent | Tomás Ortega (Alfonso Herrera) is a progressive, ambitious, and understanding priest who coordinates a small parish located in suburban Chicago. Pastor Marcus Keane (Ben Daniels) works in one of Mexico City's poorest neighborhoods, completely obsessed with his religious mission. The two met when they needed to deal with a case of demonic possession that befell Rance's family, which was part of Father Thomas's parody. Desperate at the situation her daughter Katherine (Brianne Howey), Angela (Geena Davis) seeks the help of a priest. As much as they have big differences in behavior, they need to join forces to face the biggest challenges of their lives. Posted On: September 12, 2020 Views: 910 At an archaeological site in Hatra, near Nineveh, Iraq, archaeologist and priest Lankester Merrin (Max von Sydow) visited the excavation where a small stone statue of a large and terrible creature was found. Merrin later discovered a strange Pazuzu statue, which had a head similar to the one previously found. Meanwhile, Damien Karras (Jason Miller), a young priest at Georgetown University, begins to doubt his faith in dealing with his mother's terminal illness. Chris MacNeil (Ellen Burstyn), an actress filming at Georgetown, notices a dramatic and dangerous behavior change in her 12-year-old daughter, Regan MacNeil (Linda Blair). The girl had a seizure and showed supernatural powers such as levitation and great power. Regan swears and blasphemes him with the voice of a male demon. Initially, Chris thought Regan's changes were related to his entry into puberty, but doctors suspected an injury to his brain. Regan underwent a series of unpleasant medical tests that did not allege anything abnormal, and doctors recommended Regan to a psychiatrist, who Reagan attacked harshly. Paranormal events continue to occur, including bed shaking, strange noises and unexplained movements. Exhausted medical resources, one of the doctors recommended an exorcism, suggesting that Regan's symptoms were the result of demonic possession and had to be resolved by a priest. In desperation, Chris consults Father Karras, because he, in addition to being a priest, is a psychiatrist. During the period when Karras observes Regan, he constantly refers to himself as Satan. Karras initially believed that the girl was suffering from psychosis, until she remembered she was speaking in a strange language, which was the truth Back ward. Despite his doubts, Karras decided to ask the Church for permission to perform an exorcism. Father Merrin, an experienced exorcist, was rushed to Washington for help. Merrin and Karras try to scare Regan's evil spirits. Satan threatened and attacked both priests, verbally and physically, including using Karras' mother's voice to disturb him, and Merrin had a heart attack. Karras tried to help Merrin, but he died. Karras then grabs

the girl's neck and challenges the devil to leave Regan and enter her. The devil didn't, and Karras committed suicide by throwing himself out the window. Down there, devastated, Father Dyer (William O'Malley) gives karras extreme colors. Regan, in the absence of the devil, recovered his health and could not remember anything that happened, and left Georgetown with his mother. The memories he suppresses are when he's possessed by demons. The discovery of Tuskin, a device that hypnotizes two people and connects their minds together, reveals that the devil, named Pazuzu, is still lurking within him. It is desperate to appear again and wreak havoc. Meanwhile, Father Philip Lamont was ordered by his cardinal to investigate the death of Father Merrin, the priest who died during an exorcism on Regan. Father Lamont did his job reluctantly.
