Instagram accounts are a popular target for hackers. I know this firsthand because someone pretended to be me to try to steal some accounts. Fortunately, they failed, but if you have a weak password, you may not be so lucky. Let's look at how to change your Instagram password to something a little safer. RELATED: Your passwords are terrible and it's time to do something about it Open the Instagram app and go to your profile page. Tap the Settings icon in the upper-right corner, and then select Change Password. Enter your current password and new password twice. Click Done and the new password will be set. If you don't have access to your smartphone, you can also change your Instagram password by going to www.Instagram.com/accounts/password/change/. Enter your old password and new password twice, click Change password, and the password will be updated. A strong password is just one way you can protect your Instagram account. If you want to make it really safe, you should also enable two-factor authentication. AhmadDanialZulhilm/Shutterstock Keeping your password updated is very important, especially for streaming services that have personal information. Fortunately, it's easy to update hulu password, and here's just how to do it. Start by visiting the Hulu desktop website and then select the account icon in the upper right corner. After the menu appears, select the Account link. You should now be able to view your account information. Click the Change password link next to your current password in your account section. The Change Password field appears. Enter the current password, and then enter the new password twice. Make sure the password is strong and cannot be easily guessed. After filling in the password, select the Save Changes button to Password. Sign back in to your account on all devices that you want to access the streaming service. Now that your password is secure and up-to-date, you can breathe a little easier. Be sure to update any friends or family members that may be using your Hulu account. Your service is now secure with a better password and you can continue streaming. Everyone has made an embarrassing username in their life that I ended up regretting. Whether you have an annoying username from 5 years ago or simply something misspelled, here's how you can go back and change it to Twitch. Previously, if you wanted a new username on Twitch, you'd need to create a brand new account. Creating a new channel was a problem for several reasons - not only would streamers lose the entire list of followers and subscribers on their first channel, but all their settings and preferences would also be lost. Now, all you have to do is click on a few simple steps to change your account name. This can be done once every 60 days. Start by signing in to your Twitch account. On the home page, click your username in the upper-right corner, and then select Settings from the drop-down menu. On the Profile Settings page, search for a change to your text group, Username and Display Name. Here you can also change your CV (About me section on twitch channel). Your new username will take effect as soon as you make changes to the Profile Settings section. Your followers and live subscribers will see that your name has changed on your Twitch channel. The uppercase letters of the display name can be freely customized, but they must be the same spelling as your username. Your Twitch display name appears next to comments and appears on your profile. According to a Twitch blog post, once you change your username, the abandoned username will be held by the platform for a minimum of 6 months. Then, Twitch returns the username to the pool of available community and new user options to choose from, except for twitch partner usernames that will only be recycled under special circumstances. Whether you suspect someone has gained unauthorized access to your Facebook account, or you simply forgot your Facebook password so you can't sign in, you can easily reset your password on facebook or using the iOS or Android Facebook app. If you're already signed in to your Facebook account, or you can sign in and want to change your password, follow these steps. Select the down arrow when you sign Facebook.com account on the website in the upper-right corner and choose Settings. If you're using the Facebook app, tap the menu icon at the top of the Android app or at the bottom of the iOS app. Then slide down and tap Privacy Settings >. Select Security & Login > Change Password. Enter the current password and the new password. Please re-enter your new password. When you're done, select Save Changes. Save your new password to a safe place, such as a password manager. If you can't sign in to Facebook because you forgot your password, you'll need to follow a different procedure. Go to Facebook in a web browser or open the Facebook app on your mobile device. Try signing in to your account with your email address and any password you think you remember. If your credentials are incorrect, you won't be able to access your account. Do not move from the page or app. Instead, select Forgotten Password? under the login fields. Depending on the account information you've associated with your Facebook account, you'll be prompted to reset your password in one of the following three ways: Verify with your Google Account (using Gmail)Verify via email addressVerification using your phone number Make a selection and choose Continue. If you choose to reset your password with a phone number, you won't be able to do so if you have two-factor authentication enabled with that number. You must use a different phone number or email address. Follow the on-screen instructions to complete the verification process. In the fields, type a new password on Facebook and select Continue. Depending on the method you choose, you may receive a text or email message with a code that you must enter on Facebook for verification purposes. Store your new password in a safe place. Each of the best password managers can be an excellent password storage solution. If you no longer have access to the phone number or email address you currently associate with your Facebook account, Facebook suggests a few different things you can try to regain access to: Thanks for let us know! An updated entry from yesterday's Facebook blog post (via TechCrunch) shows that the company has left millions of Instagram passwords in a readable format. Originally, Facebook said it was tens of thousands of Instagram customers. Facebook says that usually its login systems are designed to mask passwords using techniques that are uneatable. The good news is, if you think Facebook, its investigation has shown that no one inside or outside the company accessed these passwords. Of course, since Facebook updated its original blog post after one month, which increases the number of passwords affected, who knows what they might say in another month? Facebook bought Instagram for about $1 billion in 2012. The company suggests that Facebook, Instagram or WhatsApp subscribers use two-factor authentication when logging in. In addition to entering a password, a code is sent to the subscriber's smartphone, which is also required for successful login. To set this setting, go to the settings menu from the Facebook app and click Security and Sign In. Subscribe to the newsletter! Newsletter!
