As founder and spiritual director of the Agape International Spiritual Center, he was an engineer of peace and dedicated his life to fostering spiritual communities around the world. A speaker and meditation teacher, Michael has won numerous humanitarian awards and appeared in films such as The Oprah Show, Larry King Live and Secret. I first noticed Michael's teachings during a chance encounter with his life vision program. The program promised the ultimate realization of my potential by teaching me the ability to live as God's love. Those who had already explored spirituality a bit on their own, I was intrigued by the concept and began to practice simple and powerful meditations on the program. The purpose of these meditations was not to reveal my dream life, but rather to create a divine dream for my life. In other words, my soul was anxious to express itself in this lifetime as opposed to the mere physical desire of the ego. Looking back on that moment a few years ago, I really start to see the seeds of that intent take root. Shortly after setting the above intentions, I captured the vision of starting this magazine. And as my own vision of God evolves and unfolds through me and into this venture, I am honored and humbled to bring you this exclusive interview with the person who helped start it all. Conscious connection: It's a blessing to be with Michael. Tell us when and how you realized your mission in life. Michael Bernard Beckwith: Thank you, and thank you too. It would be nice not to say that there is no time when we don't know what our life mission is. I believe it accompanies us in our incarnation. The real question is when we are conscious of our mission, conscious of why we have taken human incarnation. There is a considerable time gap between knowing the purpose of our life, fixing it, and finally living it. My first commitment to the spiritual path to me in the 70s, when I was a student at USC, was caught up in selling marijuana, arrested, faced considerable jail time, and was set free on the legal techniques my lawyers revealed. For about a year before that, I had a recurring dream of finally being chased by the three men who caught, stabbed and killed me. As I entered the dying process, I felt I was intervening in a magnificent being that I identified with and still knew as the beauty of love. So, at least in the human sense, go back to freedom. When I arrived home, I noticed a weather vane in the neighborhood garden away from me. It was a windy day, so if my inner experience of love beauty was as real as I felt, let's turn the weather vane.. And before I finished my sentence, an arrow pointed directly at me. Love Beauty pierced my core and I noticed that life outside of me was consistent with the inner transformation that began with my dream a year ago. I dive into spiritual exploration through meditation and the study of Eastern and Western mysticism, metaphysics and science. Eventually, he taught me to become a spiritual counselor and later a pastor of spirituality's new, thoughtless tradition of wisdom. Conscious connection: It's fascinating to hear about your first encounter with what you call love beauty, as I and many of our contributors have similar experiences. What is your vision and mission in the Agape International Center and the world? Michael Bernard Beckwith: First, let me say I didn't want to be a minister. For brevity, I founded Agape in 1986 after surrendering to this aspect of my life's mission. With several like-for-like colleagues, I thought of a cross-denominational community with an emphasis on universal spiritualityTake the position of unconditional love, inclusiveness, and being profitable on earth. The means of Agape's mission are 20 local and global humanitarian services. Conscious connection: I like trans-denominational ideas, including the most life-affirming aspects of all religions, transcending the religions we know now and defining them. Open source spirituality if you do. So how can readers apply these universal spiritual principles as a means of enriching their lives? Michael Bernard Beckwith: Universal spiritual principles transcend religious doctrine and point to our spiritual origins as individual representations of creator sources endearing with enlightened consciousness. Before applying universal principles, there must be genuine hunger, an inner impulse to discover them. Once discovered, the reasons and methods that make them evolve and increase our ability to live our best potential are in plain sight, as methods are inherent in the path that individuals are led to take. I would like to say that the universal spiritual principle is our transport to change. Each of us evolves according to our own unique pattern of enfolding, so there are so many spiritual paths on earth, and depending on its uniqueness, the reason for moving from path to path is more individual than others. It seems paradoxical that our spiritual practice culminates in recognizing that we have been enlightened all along, but it is certainly one universal principle or law that, humanly speaking, can certainly be a nuisance along the way. And then there's the great mystery of existence where the mind can't be wrapped up and there are no words. Conscious connection: Existence is certainly a great mystery! How and why you made it, and explain its basics for the reader?Michael Bernard Beckwith: Indeed. In fact, the life vision process came from me in that it revealed the purpose of my life. What I mean was that I was not going to origin anything other than to catch why I took this incarnation. So, after centering myself on a meditative state, I put a certain question before my authentic self, something sacred in each of us that leads us through my intuitive faculty. LVP led me to the founding of Agape and now, 27 years later, thousands of individuals are practicing LVP as a spiritual technology that will put them at the helm of the co-creative process of their lives. When it comes to very basic descriptions, we first focus ourselves through meditation and contemplation prayers to revitalize the field of unconditional love. When your consciousness opens up and becomes receptive, youBefore your higher self: What is the best vision of my life? What qualities do I need to develop? What qualities do I need to release? What talents, gifts, skills, and qualities can help with this vision? Then open your mind and follow deep listening to determine if anything happens. This practice can be applied effectively in all aspects of life. Now, what I've explained is a quick glimpse into lvp practices, so for interested readers, they can refer to my book, Life Vision, for a deeper understanding of why and how it works and steps. Converse Connection: Speaking of books, I understand that I released a new title with a music CD titled TranscendDance Expanded and won the Nautilus Award in that category. Michael Bernard Beckwith: TranscendDance Expanded, what I call a workplay project, was deliberate in its concept and fruiting pleasure. The first release was only on CDs. I then received many requests to ask about the origins of the poems I spoke about, re-releasing my talking book (including CDs), from which the poems I speak were taken to plug in the original vibrating sounds of the talks that inspired the music. The feedback I'm getting is that jogging, Zumba, working out and doing yoga is great. Converse Connection: Do you have your favorite work on cd? Michael Bernard Beckwith: I love the creativity of all the talented performers I've been a part of, but I confess to having my last track, my personal favorite, Mystical Chords of Memory, an 11-minute, nine-second guided meditation that was not pre-written or rehearsed. I just learned that it is used by children at risk as well as in the New York school system in yoga studios and spiritual seminars. That cool part is why I encourage people to go beyond self-consciousness and have the courage to offer their gifts, talents and skills in the world, because I don't know how far what was born of inspiration in the mind can reach out and have a positive uplifting impact on the world. Conscious connection: Great, thank you very much again for sharing your wisdom with our community here! Peace and blessings for everyone in the conscious connection community.
