They got a green puke between their rotten toes and snotty passes from their funky nose. I hope all square become syphilis wrecks. I hope they fall through their ass-holes and break their mother's necks. It was the first time I heard it. It was the first time in the crowd, too. They roared and asked him to do it again. He looked at the hand-painted Chinese screen. All eyes turned to Top and Sweet come into the room. An old black stud wearing a white silk patch over his right eye trailed behind them. Peaches followed him. He looked like a vulture decked out in a gray mohair vine. Peaches stood at the white velour couch and bared her tusks. Three pimps sitting on it scattered at it like quail with a double barreled shotgun. They stripped their rear ends on the carpet. Sweet, Top, and Peaches sat on the couch. I sat on a satin pillow in the corner by the glass door. I watched the show. I saw Patch Eye go and sit behind a bar. Everyone had a big half-circle around the sofa. It was like a couch was stage, and a Sweet star. Sweet said, Well, how are you silly bastards like a fight? Does the murder that or his black ass turn yellow? A southern white with a wide face and a deliberate voice like Bankhead's drawled, Mistah Jones, Ahm happy repoot thet Niggah run the white stud back into his mammy's ass thu fust round. Everyone laughed, except Sweet. He was crashing his mittens. I wondered what madness bubbled his skull as he looked at him. High-ass yellow wide flicked life back into the phonograph. Gloomy Sunday, a suicide favorite, dirged through the room. She was looking at me when she came away. Sweet said: Okay, you freakish pigs. Patch Eye's got outfits and bags of poison. You go mark croak yourself. They began rising from satin pillows and velour ottoman. They gathered around Patch Eye at the bar. A high-ass yellow wide came to me. She leaned in front of me. I saw black songs on her inner thighs. Inside her gaping cat was a beef steak red. She had a shiv slash on the right side of her face. It was livid gully from her cheekbone to the corner of her twisted mouth. Smallpox crater on her face. I caught a glow pearl processed switch-blade in her chest. Her gray eyes swirled in her skull. She was high. I was careful. I smiled. Sweet was digging for us. He shook his head in disgust. I wondered if he thought I would oughta slug her jib and maybe take that shiv to the gut. She said, Let me see that pretty dick, beautiful. I said, I don't show my swipe weird. I've got a to pamper my swipe. She said, Negro, you haven't heard of me? I'm Red Cora from Detroit. This is a gritty truth, a life hustler on the south side of Chicago, where the only characters are those who con and those who get conned. Trick Baby tells the story of a White Folks, blue-eyed, light-haired, con-artist whose pale skin allows him to walk the streets like a white man. Folks are tormented early in life, rejected by other children and branded Trick Baby, a child conceived between a and her trick. Refusing to leave his life in the ghetto and the chance of revenge, Folks is taken under the wing of an older mentor, Blue. What happens next is not to be believed. Only Slim could give us a story about a hustler, forced to learn the game and rise to the top. It's a Slim story, and he tells it the only way he knows how, in the language of the streets. From a multi-million copy master to vernacular black literature and pioneer hip hop culture, a masterpiece of crime fiction set in Los Angeles's meanest, toughest streets. Here is the newfound novel Iceberg Slim, the creator and undisputed master of African-American street literature, a man who deeply influences hip hop and rap culture and has probably sold more books than any other black American author of the twentieth century that he saw royalties from these sales). In many ways Iceberg Slim's most mature fictional work, Shetani's sister falls, in a taut, evocative homeland torn directly from a street corner, a deadly duel between two complex antiheroes: Sergeant Russell Rucker, an LAPD vice detective trying to clean up street prostitution and police corruption, and Shetani (Swahili Satan), a deadly duel between two complex antiheroes: Sergeant Russell Rucker, lapd vice detective trying to clean up street prostitution and police corruption, and Shetani (Swahili Satan), an atrusting veteran pimp who controls his stable with violence and daily doses of heroin. Mama Black Widow tells the tragic story of Otis Tilson, a stunning black drag queen trapped in a cruel queer ghetto underworld. Hoping to avoid racial bigotry and economic injustice in the south, the Otis family travels north of their plantations to the city's promised land. Once in Chicago, Otis and his brother and sisters become prisoners for the waste of violence, crime, prostitution and rape. This is a gut-wrenching story about the destruction of the family and the truest depiction of homosexuality in the ghetto ever told. In this collection of six grainy tales from underground, Iceberg Slim brings tribute to the streets and those forced to try to survive them. The Iceberg Slim story is now featured in a large motion picture distributed around the world. Iceberg Slim: Portrait of a Pimp shows a Slim transformation from pimp to author of 7 classic books.
