The heavens declare the glory of god scripture

Psalm 19: The heavens proclaim the Glory of God's Psalm 19:1-11 For the Director of Music. Psalm of the Davids. The heavens proclaim the glory of God; the heavens proclaim the work of his hands. Day after day they pour out speech; show knowledge night after night. There is no language or language where their voice is not heard. Their voice goes out to the whole country, their words to the ends of the world. In the heavens, he set up a tent for the sun, which is like a groom rising from his pavilion, like a champion who rejoices to go his way. He rises at one end of the heavens and makes his circuit to the other; nothing is hidden from his heat. The law of Jehovah is perfect, it revives the soul. The statutes of Jehovah are trustworthy, making the wise simple. The commandments of Jehovah are right, to give joy to the heart. The commands of the Lord are radiant, to give light to the eyes. The fear of the Lord is pure, lasting forever. The ordinances of Jehovah are certain and entirely righteous. They are more valuable than gold than much pure gold; are sweeter than honey than honey from a comb. Your servant is warned of them, there is a great reward in maintaining them. This extraordinary Psalm David, written 3,000 years ago, shows not only what a deep thinker, and theologian, and poet was, but how he adored the Lord and his word. His view of God is sming of his majestic inspiring poetry. It challenges our intellect and our feelings. His presence in the world (as his words now address you) is proof of the existence of God. As an abandoned church would have to survive 3,000 years without this glorious psalm, she had never heard of him preaching. How immediate this psalm is, how existential, dynamic, and relevant. Tonight, when you go home, and you see a sunset over a bay of colors different because of the dust in the air from the Icelandic volcano, the heavens will tell you about the glory of God. It is God who will follow you, and Allah speaks to you. God of the Bible. How much our age and our community needs reminders of this psalm on so many different levels. David was surrounded by nations that truly worshipped the sun, the moon, and the stars. They kissed their hand to the host of heaven. Little has changed in 3,000 years. In the last six months, Jyoti has texted me from Calcutta and said: Don't go to India and don't speak at our meetings in January. It is at the same time as the Kumbh Mela festival and this year is especially important for Hindus due to a certain arrangement of sun, moon and stars. 30 million people dive into the Ganges River near Lucknow, where two more rivers flow into it. They believe that washing in the frosty Ganges on this occasion will remove their sins. Hindu feelings run very high during these weeks and Christian gatherings can and special encounters are considered provocative, all because of how millions of people read the stars. In the secular west, it's different; Here people look at the universe and say: We are not lucky to be surrounded by such beauty. He thinks the glory that surrounds us is there just for chance! Yet they are completely inconsistent. They also crave some overall principle to guide them. Chance alone can not satisfy, so the number of them turns to their horoscopes and checks their star characters. They will read their favorite astrologer in the belief that the position of the distant sun and the ambit of some of the planets of our solar system will tell them what choices they should make in big decisions this week – whether they should marry this person or not. Decision making with a horoscope! The Christian also looks at the sun, moon and stars, but has none of these views. He does not worship the stars; He doesn't believe that happiness created the heavens, he doesn't get guidance from the stars. He worships the creator of the heavens and the earth which was David's God. Through faith in Jesus Christ, a Christian knows the Creator as his heavenly Father and Savior. He is moved to wonder that he may cry 'Abba The Father' at the Creator of our planet Earth, our solar system planets, our galaxy called the Milky Way and the entire universe. The heavens say the glory of God (vv.1-6). David tells us that the world around us and above us is the media that God speaks to humanity and speaks very strongly. He doesn't whisper or suggest to the people of this planet that he's famous. God's media proclaims and proclaims this message clearly: God's own hands created this world, and he is glorious (v.1). David says that the heavens pour out this message, and they display this knowledge. The words pour forth (v.3) speak of an Artesian well or geyser that unmistakably sends a cascade of hot water into the air, or the fresh spring that bubbles never dries. They're flooding the whole world from day to day. This is not a local flood; pour out everywhere, God's words, at any time of the year, regardless of the weather, day and night, winds, rain, sun, snow, hail, rainbows, storms and deep peace, all this declares this message: Isn't God famous? There is no 'spin' on this report at all. The message from the creation cannot be gagged. It's not that one day there's some strange meteorological state, and on that day the heavens can't speak this message, or say something else about another god or not to God. There is always this manifestation; it is never silenced, and his tongue and his voice is heard going out to the whole country, to its very end (v.4), and it says one thing always, night and day, that our God is famous he's done everything we see. When we talk about 'media', then in general we mean TV and radio, newspapers and magazines, film, recordings and so on. Media is the ways and means by which a message with the contents of a certificate comes to us. All politicians are using all the media they can at the moment to reach out to us with their reports. So David tells us that God uses the means to communicate with the people who live on this planet. God speaks through His creation; it was done with such skill and beauty that it has one absolutely clear and consistent message. It's the divine media that gets his word into the human race. It is a statement of itself through nature; it's a natural revelation. It is available to everyone, bankers in the City of London or the tribe in the most remote place on earth, who has almost no behavior with anyone else. They, too, accept this revelation because it is a general revelation through creation for every person on this planet. He says: God is glorious, and God's hands have created this world, and he says it constantly and clearly. Just think that no one is ignorant of God. Simply by opening your eyes and ears and seeing the creatures that are looking at the divinely created and enduring media that bring their message that God is and that he is powerful and glorious. Consider the sun. Do you see at the end of verse four that the sun is introduced quite suddenly? David wants us to be aware that he doesn't speak vaguely about 'nature' for what it may be. Nature is a classic concept. David talks about the sun, the moon and the stars. The sun dominates everything above us. It keeps all mankind and everything that lives and moves alive. Without the sun, there would be nothing. It dominates the world, cheery, magnificent, and yet it is not the law for itself. He can't say: I don't want to climb east this morning... I don't think I'm going to rise today. I'm tinging through the sky, and then I'm going to get some rest, and I'm going to knock down for a while, and then I'm going to reappear... No, the sun obeys its Creator and obeys his laws. God has set up a tent for the sun, and that tent is the sky, stretching from one horizon to another. Maybe you were in the praiches of Canada, where the soil is flat for hundreds of kilometers and there is a large sky. All this vast expanse is God's awning for the sun. God has made it in his place, and then the sun calls, now come forth the sun; You know what to do and when to rise, and when and where to set up today. Go for it! Then this great, red, burning ball of light and heat appears - oh, how wonderful it is! - and then day breaks, the morning of his rise. Off goes on his course, and as we welcome the sun after a long dark night. Rises at one end and makes its circumference on the other; nothing is hidden from its heat (v.6). What a panic it would be if he didn't show up! The sun, so glorious, but all its glory is the glory of God, its Creator. As John Milton says: You sun, from this great world, both eyes and souls, admit Him in greater; you will hear his praise as if you rise, and when the high noon has gained, and when you fall' st. Why can we compare the sun? David says: Remember some great monarch, tsar, maharaga or the most important man in the world who is dazzling in his wedding reception, in the uniform of a major general. He resigns from the state coach and he faces the eyes of the whole world - the strongest and handsome of all the grooms making his long-awaited appearance on this day. Or again David has another analogy to that of a champion athlete; The sun is like a fabulous gold medal winner in all ten individual races at the Olympics, 100 meters, 110 meters hurdles, 200 meters, 400 meters, 400 meters hurdles, 800 meters, 1500 meters, 3000 meters, 3000 meters steeplechase, 5000 meters, 10,000 meters, and marathon. This champion left the blocks, starts every race and wins them all! He enjoyed every race and every victory. There has never been anyone like him - a champion rejoicing to run his course (v.5) - what a champion our Lord is. Without it, there was nothing to be made. It's a wonderful sight, the sun sets every day and sends out light and warmth and health and energy as the year succeeds year. It was God who thought of creating the sun. He designed it and the entire solar system. He made the earth and placed the sun 93 million miles away. Further, and we would always be freezing; closer and we'd be caught on a frazzle. The next closest sun to our Earth is 25 trillion miles away, a small flashing star. None of these details is a matter of luck. God's hands did it. He can hold the sun and not get burned. So the heavens tell his glory and power. And thus I have told you that there is a revelation of God in this world, and it leaves you without apology for not believing in it. Earlier this month, Professor Anthony Flew of Reading University died. Students who endured philosophy here in the 1960s and 1970s were regaled with his approach to reality. He was cited as a great authority on philosophy -Anthony Flew. As a man he was tall, angular and energetic; he was one of the most famous atheists of his generation, but a few years ago he rejected his atheism. He became an apostasy atheist. What convinced him that God existed was the testimony of God in creation, especially the discovery of 50 years of DNA research, which he believed gave us the materials for a new and extremely powerful argument that the world was designed; cosmos did not probably by accident. The arguments for God's power and intelligence were now much stronger than ever, he said. In 2007, he wrote a book called There Is a God: How the World's Most Notorious Atheist Changed His Mind. So, in the example of his change, we have another small sign that the knowledge of God is displayed on the earth. Now, how can I use the revelation of God in his creation? Let me turn it around in two ways, firstly, when Paul used it when he went to Lystra with Barnabas. There he appealed to the Greek idol-worshippers of this city, rejected their failed religion and told them of the living Creator. We bring you good news and tell you to turn away from these worthless things to the living God who has made heaven and earth and sea and all in them. In the past, he let all nations go their own way. Yet he did not leave himself without a testimony; He did you good by giving you rain from heaven and crops in their seasons; it provides you with enough food and fills your heart with joy (Acts 14:15-17). This is our message to you that God created the world and everything in it. It was the same God who showed you personal kindness, even though you ignored him for years, bless you with prosperity and with this beautiful spring weather, full of fridges, cupboards full of food and drink, shelves lined with books, walls of hanging paintings, music centers full of CDs of the best songs of the ages. He is the one who gave you your joyful heart in all the many happy days you have come to know. You owe god who has blessed you richly. His testimony is in the heavens above you and the gifts you have received from him. That's Paul's immutable message to the Greeks. Later in Athens he told them: What you worship as something unknown, I will proclaim to you. The God who created the world and all in it is the Lord of heaven and earth (Acts 18:23&#24). Paul also wrote a similar message to the Romans, but also with a warning: God's wrath is revealed from heaven against all the wickedness and wickedness of men who suppress truth by their wickedness, because what can be known about God is clear to them, because God has made it clear to them. For from the creation of the world, God's invisible qualities—his eternal power and divine nature—are clearly visible, and they are understood from what has been done, so that people are without excuse. For even though they knew God, they did not glorify him as God, nor did they give thanks to him, but their thinking became futile, and their foolish hearts were embroied. Although they claimed to be wise, they became fools and exchanged the glory of the immortal God for images that looked like mortal man and birds and animals and reptiles (Roma. 1:18-23). God speaks to our city: You have the Bible, but you refuse It. You don't come to have the Bible explained, but God will still tell you about himself. The heavens tell you that God is infinitely powerful, wise, and glorious. And they are majestic testimonies of the glory of God. God has made it clear to you. In other words, you truly know God, even if you protest that you do not worship him as God, nor do you thank him as your mighty glorious Creator, the author of all the good things you have enjoyed in your life. You're not going to see him for mercy. You see men and women who are created in God's image and likeness, who have actually given their lives for other people. Your own mothers sacrificed themselves, their time and effort, gave you the best food so you could be strong and get into life. You were the recipient of the sacrifice of others who loved you. They behaved because God created them in His image. Yet you will not come to hear the Bible preached, and you will not read. Yet through what you see out there, in heaven and on earth, and also in the lives of Christian people, you know that it is a powerful testimony that speaks to you of the reality of the living God. You are without excuse when you step on that voice that speaks to you from your parents and friends, but especially from creation. Professor Anthony Flew had a much greater intellect than I did. He opposed the existence of God for sixty years, and yet he was an honest man, and he ultimately had to acknowledge god who made this world. Please do not stay where he remained until his death, believing in God, but not in God who has come forward in his Son, Jesus Christ. To discover this Savior, you must read the Bible! Please go to the Bible sermon. Look for him. Listen to your friends in your family and in the workplace and university that you know are true professed Christians. This revelation of God, which you have in creation, is powerful. Please don't ignore it. It's personal to you because God is a personal God. He praises you when you restrain yourself and show kindness and love for others, and reproachs you when you hurt those you love, and when you break God's laws - things he has written in your hearts. You're no excuse. You know what God expects of you. You know by what standards God will judge you. But alas, this revelation, rich as it is, does not bring you to eternal life with God. Today you know him only as the mighty glorious Creator who receives you for your sin, who is angry with you every day. He's your enemy, not your friend. God's wrath will reveal them from heaven against you. In other words, what God says in nature tells you a lot, but it does not tell you how to be saved from anger Creation and conscience give you the law, but it does not give you the gospel. You need a Bible to do that. So from heaven, which say the glory of God, we turn to the fact that... THE SCRIPTURES SAY GOD'S REWARDS. (vv.7-11) This passage about the Scriptures ends with these words; With them your servant is warned; there is a great reward in maintaining them (v.11). Now there are a few things we need to point out first about this part of the psalm. First, that in the first six verses of Psalm 19 the name for God that was used is the world of El. In other words, it is a word for God the Creator, the God of mighty power, and in the beginning he created the heavens and the earth himself. What moral attributes of love and mercy and grace might have also we are not aware of in this name El, simply that being the creator and promoting the universe and its power and Divinity is evident everywhere. But now from the seventh verse on his covenant the name of Jehovah or Yahweh is referred to. Can you see that? The name of the Lord in the scriptures is found in verse after verse in this section. Another feature I want you to notice is the very obvious way David makes a number of observations about the Bible, and how the structure is that he uses six different titles to describe scripture. They all add something a little different than the nature of scripture; all contribute a little differently to our understanding of this miraculous book, which almost all of us have in front of us. This book is another revelation of God; it's a redeeming revelation. Then notice something else that each of the six descriptions of scripture has a balancing adjective that describes the characteristics of the Bible, that it is perfect, trustworthy, true, radiant, pure, and sure. But David is not finished; Note that the six divine effects mentioned, the Bible revives the soul... The Bible makes wise simple . . . The Bible gives joy to the heart... The Bible gives light to the eyes... The Bible lasts forever... The Bible is entirely righteous. Can you imagine me offering you a product today and telling you - quite truthfully - what this production would do for you if you took it into your life, that it would revive your soul, make you wise, give you joy to your heart, give light to your eyes, last forever, and be completely reliable? Would I have any trouble getting rid of the boxes? If you should say: How much is it? and that you would be willing to pay big money for something that would certainly revive your soul, make you wise, give you joy in your heart, give you light, last forever, and be completely reliable? You shout: Twenty thousand pounds, if it can be mine and do it all for me! Cheap for the price! I'm telling you, it's free. It's god's message. In this case, with all its darkness and confusion there is such an entiy as the word of God, infallible, unmistakable, permanent forever, saying exactly what God wants him to say. Jesus spoke of it; Your word is true. The word of the Lord lasts forever. It's written... All this breathless joy of the Bible prepares us for our great conclusion of how precious scripture is and how profound their achievements are: They are more valuable than gold than much pure gold; are sweeter than honey than honey from a comb. Your servant is warned of them. there is a great reward in maintaining them. (vv.10&#24). I would like to tell you six reasons why you should be biblical boys and girls and men and women. I] The law of Jehovah is perfect, revives the soul. The word law means divine instruction. God himself trains and tells us how to live, that he cares about how we behave in his world, that he is angry at cruelty and theft and torture, that he loves goodness, forgetfulness, and patience. God's law is like himself. It is perfect and one of the features of its perfection is its simplicity. The Ten Commandments are among the simplest parts of scripture. Even in the 21st century, they are not extreme; They're not childish. They're just beautiful. They can summarize them in this way, love almighty God with all our beings, and love their neighbor as themselves. Isn't that the perfect law? The Ten Commandments consist of 173 words in Hebrew. You compare this with european union regulations on the import of cauliflower, which consists of 30 000 words. Proponents of so-called situational ethics say that there are no absolute standards for right and wrong. All these laws are imperfect. Each action must be drawn up on its own. Joseph Fletcher, one of his spokesmen, said: Only love is a constant; everything else is variable. This is not so far from saying: If it feels good for you or for both of you, then go ahead and do it. The Bible says: The law of the Lord is perfect. A student came to me one day thinking he was being chased. He had no idea what was right or wrong, so he made some big mistakes hurting the people who loved him. He had two great needs: to know the law of the Lord and to know the mercy of God in Jesus Christ to our Savior, and when he understood and confided in our great Redeemer, then his soul—which was tainted and weak as rotting cabbage—was revived. He had a new life from God. The law of the Lord is perfect, it revives the soul. That's one of the reasons you should be a biblical person. ii] The statutes of the Lord are trustworthy, so the wise simple. The word law is another word for law, but it reminds us that it is official and that its violation carries a penalty. I they think every religious book is trustworthy. In fact, very little is. Most of them say that's what they're not. Their claims don't bind my conscience to trust them. I do not consider the Book of Mormon to be credible. I don't believe papal encyclicals are credible. I do not agree that the Koran is credible. I reject the Tibetan book of the dead as completely untrustworthy in all its versions. I warn you, Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy's writings cannot be trusted. I don't trust the Watchtower's publications. Can you believe you're going to live in an Islamic theocracy where women are stoned to death for adultery and where thieves get their hands cut off? Would you trust your children to work there? They are untrustworthy countries to live in, because the laws that teach the inhabitants of these nations are hard and extreme laws. But the Lord's statutes are entirely credible. The Son of God believed them all and quoted them from all their parts. He said to God: Your word is the truth. The Lord's statutes say things like: You do this to others the way you would like them to do to you. They say, love your neighbor as yourself... love your enemy... forgive seventy-seven times. These laws bring wisdom to the common people (v.7), the wives of lecturers, tongs, window cleaners, and check-out girls. Peter was a fisherman, John Bunyan was a wiremaker, William Carey was a shoemaker, Gladys Aylward was a serving woman, and yet through the influence of the Scriptures simple people as well as that they became very wise people. Through the impact of the lord's statutes on their lives, the fate of the human race has grown and changed. That's why you can trust the Bible. You can hardly read too much, or hear too much, or use too much, or listen too much, or love too much because it is absolutely trustworthy. That's why you should be Bible boys or girls, because then you would grow up to become a Bible of men and women, totally trustworthy people. iii] The Lord's commandments are right and give joy to the heart. There are some dots in the Old Testament that are confusing, some of its laws and prohibitions are puzzling, but they were right in the time of theocracy under the Old Testament Treaty. This exception has now passed and its civil legislation, but at the time they were right. There are also some New Testament teachings that you might want to question, for example, that some offices of leadership and teaching are closed to women in the church, but they are right. Then God tells us that he chose a huge number of people before the foundation of the world to be saved, and that they themselves will be saved, and so it must be right if God has done that. Yet God also tells that it is not his will, that everyone should perish, and that he sincerely desires all and women to turn away from their sins and follow him, and if God has said that then it must be right. I know it is impossible to reconcile two such seemingly contradictory teachings as you, but both are clearly found in the Bible, and so both are right. The Bible also tells us that once, long ago, in the presence of God in heaven, where there was no sin at all the angel rebelled against him, and many spirits joined with that angel and were banished from heaven, and that was the origin of the devil. I can't understand how this could happen in heaven, but it's being taught in the Bible, and so it's right. You may think that the sexual relationship between two men or two women can not be wrong, because they both seem so beautiful, but while God praises their friendship, do not assume genital activity, and if God said it was right. The Lord's commandment is right. But they are not only right, they give joy to the heart. You may think you enjoy doing some things that God's Word won't find right, but the end of all those things is death. Joy in your hearts, that is, what the Bible calls a blessing, is found only in the taking up of your cross and denial of yourself and keeping the commandments of God. That's the only way to be happy in your heart. Without it, your life will be one of guilt and suffering, and all the alcohol and nicotine and drugs in the world will not inject joy into your hearts. That is why you must be a bible man or woman iv] The commands of the Lord are shining to give light to the eyes. Here is an command from the Lord that radiates light and peace: Come un to me, all who are tired and burdened, and I will give you rest. Take on my yoke and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. It's easy for my yoke, and my burden is light (Matt.11:28-30). Will your eyes light up at the sound of the command? Here's another command: Don't let your heart bother you. Trust in God; trust in me, too. There are many rooms in my Father's house; If it wasn't, I'd tell you. I'm going there to make room for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back and take you to be with me so that you may also be where I am (J 14:1-3). Such a master's command shines. It'll light up your eyes. The eyes of so many people you meet are dead. Only by being aware of the lord's commands will you find light and life. v] Fear of the Lord is pure lasting forever. We were afraid of our principal at school, but that fear of us didn't make us clean schoolchildren. Privates will fear their sergeants, but this fear does not make them pure soldiers. The Russians feared Stalin, and the Chinese feared Mao, but that fear did not reassure these nations. But the holy angels who wait to God's right hand remain pure until I In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth; Shouldn't we be afraid of God? It is light, and there is no darkness in it; Shouldn't we be afraid of him? And he cast the sinners into Hell, but he rejected the sinners into Hell! Should we not fear him? But our fear is holy reverence and it is full of love. This holy, sin-hating God loved us so much that he judged and condemned His Son to Golgoth that we could be forgiven and go finally to heaven. So we love him, but our love never becomes sentimental; We never take him for granted. We always worship him; We'll never stop worshipping him, that lasts forever. Bible boys and girls and men and women sing Oh, as I fear You, the living God, with the deepest, most priestly fears, and worship You with trembling hope and repentant tears. [Frederick W. Faber vi] The ordinances of the Lord are certain and entirely righteous. We saw fad after fad enter the Welsh pulpit and briefly rule before it became unpopular and discarded. Then we saw another uzurt rise to another brief domination. We have seen the rise of education, socialism, pacifism, nationalism, internationalism and feminism and ecology, which are trying to replace the gospel and fall. They all showed up, took the bow, quickly refused, and now they are nothing more. The pulpits that still entertained them are now closing every week. The messages that everyone spoke were not a solid rock of the gospel; they saw some truths, but not the whole truth. They made some useful points, but none of them were quite fair. But the word of God is certain, and that's quite fair. So boys and girls and men and women who believe and do the ordinances of God become certain men and women in their choices and love and relationships and careers, and in their personal lives and family life and church life. As young Biblical boys and girls and then, decades later, when they die, they are sure and righteous people, and it came to them through the word of God. These six reasons are why the Bible is more valuable than gold than a lot of fine gold. That is why honey is sweet to belong to a church that believes and obeys the Bible week after week, a congregation of God's servants who accepts the warnings of the Lord humbly, and knows that if it holds the word of God it will be rewarded in this life and in the life to come. How blessed we are to have the words of God; They are more valuable than gold than much pure gold; are sweeter than honey than honey from a comb. Your servant is warned of them. there is a great reward in maintaining them. April 25, 2010 GEOFF THOMAS Geoff Thomas2019-05-31T20:24:40+00:00 Copyright © 2018 Geoff Thomas Thomas Thomas
